CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
0521615356 - The Market for Force: The Consequences of Privatizing Security
Deborah D. Avant
Table of Contents
More information

Contents

List of figure and tables page ix
List of acronyms x
Acknowledgments xiii

1 Introduction 1
Private security and the control of force: the question 3
Private security and the control of force: the answer 5
A transnational market for military and security services 7
Mercenaries, privatization, and other slippery terms 22
The current market compared 26
Why the current market? 30
Plan of the book 38

2 Private security and the control of force 40
Clarifying the control of force 40
How should privatization affect the control of force? 45
State contracts for private force 57
State regulation of private security 65
Non-state financing and the control of force 70
Methods and claims 77

3 State capacity and contracting for security 81
Sierra Leone's contracts for military services 82
Croatia's contracts for military services 98
US contracts for military services 113
Comparisons 138

4 Dilemmas in state regulation of private security exports 143
The United States 146
South Africa 157
The United Kingdom 167
Transnational markets and political trade-offs 175

5 Private financing for security and the control of force 178
Transnational corporate financing and the control of force 180
Humanitarian relief in war zones 192

© Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
0521615356 - The Market for Force: The Consequences of Privatizing Security
Deborah D. Avant
Table of Contents
More information

Conserving nature in the state of nature 204
Comparisons 215

6 Market mechanisms and the diffusion of control over force 219
Market mechanisms 219
Diffusion of control 228
Institutional innovations 240
Competing mechanisms, conflict, and change in history 245
Discussion 251

7 Conclusion 253
Institutional mechanisms and political processes 254
Globalization, the state, and the sovereign system 257

Bibliography 265
Index 302

© Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org