CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-85385-9 - Functional Categories
Pieter Muysken
Table of Contents
More information

Contents

List of tables page xi
List of figures xiv
Preface xv
List of abbreviations xvii

1 Introduction 1
Theoretical perspectives on categorisation 3
The perspective taken in this book 5
Disclaimers 7
The organisation of this book 8

GRAMMAR

2 Functional categories and language typology 13
Structuralism: Sapir and Jakobson 14
The notional classification of functional categories 15
Expanding the range of functional categories in language description 16
Towards a new classification 20
Conclusions 25

3 Lexical, morphological, and phonological dimensions of functional categories 26
Lexical realisation 26
A case study: Quechua 29
Other criteria 32
Primitives at the interface 39
Clitics 40
Conclusions 41

4 Semantics and pragmatics 42
Semantic features of functional categories 42
The syntax/semantics interface and the interpretability of features 46

© Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-85385-9 - Functional Categories
Pieter Muysken
Table of Contents
More information

Deletability and expression as a null form 47
The special status of discourse markers 48
Interjections 51
Conclusions 52

5 Theoretical syntax: the generative tradition 53
Historical overview 54
Theoretical considerations 58
Diagnostic criteria 61
The category P 65
Conclusions 70

HISTORICAL LINGUISTICS

6 Grammaticalisation 73
Different dimensions of the grammaticalisation process 76
Frequently emerging functional categories 77
Grammaticalisation theory and generative models of functional categories 83
Conclusions 86

7 Linguistic reconstruction 88
Functional categories in Indo-European 90
The evidence from Proto-Uralic 91
The evidence from Afro-Asiatic 93
The evidence from Amerind 95
Conclusions 96

PSYCHOLINGUISTICS

8 Speech production 99
Production models: evidence from speech error studies 100
Garrett's distinction between functional and positional structure 105
Frequency effects 106
Evidence from neurolinguistic studies 108
Conclusions 110

9 Language development 111
First language development 111
Child bilingual development 116
Second language development 119
Conclusions 125

© Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-85385-9 - Functional Categories
Pieter Muysken
Table of Contents
More information

10 Agrammatic aphasia and Specific Language Impairment 127
Agrammatism 127
Case marking and adpositions in agrammatic speech 133
Structural interpretations of agrammatic speech 138
Specific Language Impairment 139
Conclusions 142

11 Language attrition and death 143
The study of attrition 143
Gaelic in Scotland 146
Dyirbal in north-eastern Australia 147
Hungarian in the United States 148
German in London 150
Low German in western Siberia 150
Conclusions 151

LANGUAGE CONTACT AND BILINGUAL SPEECH

12 Sign languages 155
The study of sign languages 155
Mouthing 156
Grammaticalisation 156
Reference tracking and agreement 159
Classifiers 161
Conclusions 162

13 Code-switching and code-mixing 163
The basic phenomenon 163
The wider phenomenon 165
Language distance and equivalence 167
Problem areas 168
The proper definition of functional categories 172
Conclusions 176

14 Lexical borrowing 177
Spanish borrowings in Bolivian Quechua 178
Romance borrowings in Maltese Arabic 183
Conclusions 187

15 Pidgin and creole genesis 188
Pidgins and creoles 189
Tok Pisin 193

© Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-85385-9 - Functional Categories
Pieter Muysken
Table of Contents
More information

Saramaccan 198
Negerhollands 201
Creole lexical and functional categories 205
Conclusions 209

16 Mixed languages 211
Issues of definition and delimitation 211
Classical mixed languages: Media Lengua 213
Split languages: Michif 219
Reverse split type 222
Reverse type: Spanish Romani or Caló 224
Functional categories and relexification 225
Conclusions 226

17 Foreigner Talk 227
Simple codes 229
The study of Foreigner Talk 230
Maxims, strategies, and models for Foreigner Talk 234
Conclusions 237

CONCLUSIONS

18 Conclusions: towards a modular and multi-dimensional perspective 238
Main findings from grammar 240
Main findings from historical linguistics 241
Main findings from psycholinguistics 241
Main findings from language contact studies 242
A differentiated perspective on functional categories 244
Functional categories from an evolutionary perspective 245
Prospects 253

References 255
Author index 278
Subject index 284
Language index 294

© Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org