The Centre for International Studies at the London School of Economics and Political Science was established in 1967 with the aid of a grant from the Ford Foundation. Its aim is to promote research and advanced training on a multi-disciplinary basis in the general field of international studies.

To this end the Centre sponsors research projects and seminars and endeavours to secure the publication of manuscripts arising out of them.

Whilst the Editorial Board accepts responsibility for recommending the inclusion of a volume in the series, the author is alone responsible for views and opinions expressed.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I am grateful to Michael Leifer for his generous help and advice over the writing of this book. I would also like to thank the Ford Foundation for a Graduate Fellowship and the London School of Economics for an ICERD (International Centre for Economics and Related Disciplines) research grant. In addition, the Ford Foundation provided a grant which enabled me to be attached to the Centre for Strategic and International Studies in Jakarta, and to conduct research in Indonesia, Malaysia and Singapore. The people in Indonesia who helped me are too numerous to list, though I would like to thank in particular Johannes Soedjati and Juwono Sudarsono. Finally, I would like to thank Professor Susan Strange for going over the manuscript.
