CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-08469-7 — Intellectual Education and its Influence on the Character and Happiness of Women
Emily Shirreff
Table of Contents
More Information

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

CHAPTER I.

General Views.

PAGE

Importance attached to Education in the present day 1
Neglect of principles 2
Objects of liberal and professional Education confounded . . . 3
Consequences to those classes to whom knowledge brings no worldly advancement 4
One great purpose of Education 5
Two evils resulting from forgetting that purpose—
First, Severance of intellectual and moral training . . . 6
Second, Knowledge loved only for its market value 10
Consequences of the misuse of leisure 12
Over-value for professional occupation 13
Preparation for life and real life 14
Those who have most leisure need most education 15
Women should keep up the disinterested love of knowledge . . 17
Frivolity compatible with information as a fashion 18
Effects to be expected from a spread of real mental cultivation . . 19
Women require higher education precisely because they have no outward necessity to labour 19

CHAPTER II.

Application of General Principles to Female Education.

Section 1.

Education of girls more difficult than that of boys 21
Consciously or unconsciously, parents must educate their children . . 22
A mother's studies 23
Without a definite purpose, real education impossible . . . 25
Practical education for different classes 27
Short period of female education as compared with that of men . . 28
Years telling differently on men and women 29
Twofold task of education 30
Limits of this work 32

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-08469-7 — Intellectual Education and its Influence on the Character and Happiness of Women
Emily Shirreff
Table of Contents
More Information

PAGE

Section 2.

Objects of intellectual education—grammar and geometry . . . 33
Value of even slight acquaintance with mathematics 36
Physical science left out in female education 37
Difficulty of selection for a slight course 38
Natural history 39
Astronomy 40
Geology 40
Physiology 41
Scientific reading—discipline of the reasoning power . . . 42
Study of language 43
Comparison of different languages 44
Language as the instrument of reasoning 45
Our native language alone essential 46
Imagination 47
Historical reading 48
Value of a course of elementary studies is its method 51
Difference between small and superficial knowledge 52
Variety of pursuit desirable on many accounts for women . . . 52

Section 3.

The mind of the teacher is of more importance than any means of instruction 54
With girls, teacher is synonymous with mother 55
Narrow means need not prevent sound education 55
Difference between homely cares and homely tastes 57

CHAPTER III.

MORAL TRAINING AND INFLUENCE OF HEALTH UPON CHARACTER.

Section 1.

General remarks on moral training—value of a diary of education . . 59
Moral training ought to be begun from early childhood . . . 59
Faults best combated by cultivating opposite qualities 60
Immense power of association 61
Neglected in education 63

Section 2.

Love of truth 64
Faults that tend towards creating indifference to exact truth . . . 66
Sincerity does not lead to disregard of the feelings of others . . 67
Difficult cases 67
Moral courage necessary for truthfulness 70
Acting upon a sense of duty 71
Promising element in the character of obstinate children . . . 73
Consistency in parents most necessary 73
Love of justice 74
Love of intellectual truth 76

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-08469-7 — Intellectual Education and its Influence on the Character and Happiness of Women
Emily Shirreff
Table of Contents
More Information

PAGE

Section 3.

Faults of temper—violence 77
Sullen and peevish tempers 78
Habit of complaining 80
Good-humour with difficulties 81

Section 4.

Gentleness 82
Selfishness 84
Correctives of habits of usefulness 85

Section 5.

Cheerfulness 88
Religion not always a source of cheerfulness 91
Quick sensibility yielding to emotion 92
Love of strong emotion 93
Deference to opinion 94
Vanity 96

Section 6.

Health influencing mental condition 98
Curious case of temper 101
Necessity of different treatment with different children—value of a physician's opinion 102
Another case 103
Importance of watching moral symptoms with regard to the brain . . 105
Cases of illness prompting deceit 106
Women's occupations and mode of life not favourable to health . . 108
All these considerations grow in importance as childhood passes into youth . 110
Girls should be prepared for the trials of delicate health . . . 112

CHAPTER IV.

EARLY TEACHING.

Folly of working the brain of children 114
No lessons till seven years old 115
Children's books—love of reading 116
What a girl should have learnt before twelve years old . . . 118
Needlework 120
Practical training 121
Information gained apart from lessons 123
Essential habits 124
Reasons for not entering into the subject of religious teaching 125

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-08469-7 — Intellectual Education and its Influence on the Character and Happiness of Women
Emily Shirreff
Table of Contents
More Information

CHAPTER V.

STUDIES AND GENERAL MANAGEMENT FROM TWELVE YEARS OF AGE TO FOURTEEN.

PAGE

Section 1.

Recapitulation 132
Division of studies 133
Early rising 133
Division of the day 134
Arithmetic 134
Geometry 136
Advantage of learning Latin and Greek 137
Method of learning modern languages 140
Outlines of history 143
Geography and chronology 144
Benefits to be derived from conversation 147

Section 2.

Art of reading 149
Causes of careless reading 150
Kindling the desire to know and understand 151
Different mode of dealing with difficulties 154
Inattention 155
Mental indolence 156
Originality and the want of it 158
Care required when two sisters differ much in ability 159
Cultivation of the memory 161

Section 3.

Difficulties of education arising from small means 166
Training in practical matters 167

Section 4.

Value of holidays 168
Beneficial influence of each sex on the other 170

CHAPTER VI.

STUDIES AND GENERAL MANAGEMENT FROM FOURTEEN YEARS OF AGE TO SIXTEEN.

Section 1.

Hours of study 172
Relative value of accomplishments 173
Divisions of studies 176
Natural history and physiology 177
Geology 178

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-08469-7 — Intellectual Education and its Influence on the Character and Happiness of Women
Emily Shirreff
Table of Contents
More Information

PAGE

Astronomy 179
Language and literature 179
Composition 183
Good conversation 184

Section 2.

Notes from reading 185
No system too laborious that ensures success 188
Habit of thinking 188
Diaries 189

Section 3.

Strength of character 190
Difference of home and school authority 193
Gentleness and firmness 193
Preparing the young for self-regulation 194
Sacredness of resolutions 198
Method applied to the regulation of daily life 199
Expenditure 202
Amusements 204
Love of reading—choice of books 204
Danger of exciting pleasure 209
Cultivation of the means of happiness 210
Confirmation 213

CHAPTER VII.

Studies and General Management from Sixteen Years of Age to Eighteen.

Section 1.

Division of time 215
Gradual introduction into society 216
Formation of opinions 217
Mode of judging opinions 219
Prevalence of scepticism 222
Practical moral principles 222
Doubt inevitable 223
Borrowed opinions 225
Influence of parents in the formation of opinions 225
Books to be consulted 226
Difficulties of language—use of logic 227
Method of pursuing inquiries 228
Subjects for study 230
Why women should make history a special study 231

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-08469-7 — Intellectual Education and its Influence on the Character and Happiness of Women
Emily Shirreff
Table of Contents
More Information

PAGE

Political economy 232
Method of reading history 233
Ancient history 234
Modern history—periods to be studied 237
Progress of opinion and knowledge 239
Works to be read 240
Time required for the proposed course 243

Section 2.

Modifications if necessary—expense of education 250

Section 3.

Father's influence 251
Advantage to girls of a high appreciation of manly character . . . 254

CHAPTER VIII.

SOME PECULIARITIES OF WOMAN'S SOCIAL POSITION.

When school-room education is closed, what is to follow? . . . 255
Peculiar mental trials owing to an inactive life 256
Two classes of minds incapable of intellectual excitement—
First, The practical 257
Second, The homely 259
Trial is felt when girls do not marry young 259
A London season 262
Frivolity not confined to the fashionable 263
Consequences of an unoccupied life 264
Needless restraint on unmarried daughters 266
This system encourages thoughtless marriages 267
Girls should be educated to look forward to single life 269
Low views of marriage and of the character of men 270
Employments for women—difficulties 271
Competition with men 273
Foolish tone in asserting women's claims 274
Nature marks the relative position of men and women . . . 275

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org