There are six different Themes in the book and they are all very interesting. The themes are about mysteries, the environment, change, the news, and _______.

Each Theme starts with two Topic and language Units. In Theme C, for example, the first two Units are about _______ and _______. Students learn about the history of rock music and how people make films.

While the students learn about different topics, they can also learn new language. In Unit ______, for example, students learn about natural wonders while they are learning about the passive in English.

In the Out and about Units, students can meet Samantha, Rebecca, Blake, _______ and _______. They can also discuss important topics, such as if it is right to keep the things they find.

There are also six Culture matters Units. They are about Britain, the United States of America, _______ and _______. The last Unit in each Theme is a _______ and _______ Unit. Students can revise the language they learn, and also talk about how they learn. For example, in Unit 17, Exercises 4 and 5 they can talk about checking their work and about ______ in English.

Book 3 is an excellent book! It is full of interesting things to do. Get it and see!

Moving on

1. Class news

Work in a small group. Tell each other about what you have done recently – last week, in the holidays, at the weekend.

- Last week, I went to the mountains with my family.
- In the holidays, I got a new bicycle. It’s a mountain bike.
- Last weekend, I played the guitar in a concert.
- We went walking for two days.

Now, write something about yourself for a ‘Class news’ poster. Ask the people in your group to help you with ideas, spelling, grammar and vocabulary. Later, you can add some photographs and pictures.

2. The English you learned

Work by yourself. Think for a few moments. What did you learn from your last English book? What topics did you study?

What grammar did you learn? What vocabulary areas can you remember? What activities did you do? Make some notes about what you can remember.

Compare your ideas with your neighbour. What did you enjoy doing? What did you find difficult? What would you like to do again? Tell the class what you think.
