Violent Crime
Assessing Race and Ethnic Differences

Edited by Darrell Hawkins
University of Illinois, Chicago

The authors critically examine the credibility of the evidence of group differences in rates of violent crime and debate the merits of many of the popular theories that have been put forth to explain them.

Gangs and Delinquency in Developmental Perspective

Terence P. Thornberry, Marvin D. Krohn, Alan D. Lizotte, Carolyn A. Smith, and Kimberly Tobin,
State University of New York, Albany

The findings of this book indicate that multiple developmental deficits lead to gang membership and that membership leads to an increase in delinquency.
