Reversing Sail

This book examines the global unfolding of the African Diaspora, the migrations and dispersals of people of Africa, from antiquity to the modern period. Their exploits, challenges, and struggles over a wide expanse of time are discussed in ways that link as well as differentiate past and present circumstances. The experiences of Africans in the Old World, in the Mediterranean and Islamic worlds, is followed by their movement into the New, where their plight in lands claimed by Portuguese, Spanish, Dutch, French, and English colonial powers is analyzed from enslavement through the Cold War. While appropriate mention is made of persons of renown, particular attention is paid to the everyday lives of working class people and their cultural efflorescence. The book also attempts to explain contemporary plights and struggles through the lens of history.

Michael A. Gomez is Professor of History at New York University. He is the author of Pragmatism in the Age of Jihad: The Precolonial State of Bundu (Cambridge, 1992) and Exchanging Our Country Marks: The Transformation of African Identities in the Colonial and Antebellum South (1998). He currently serves as Director of the Association for the Study of the Worldwide African Diaspora (ASWAD).

New Approaches to African History

Series Editor

Martin Klein, University of Toronto

New Approaches to African History is designed to introduce students to current findings and new ideas in African history. Although each book treats a particular case and is able to stand alone, the format allows the studies to be used as modules in general courses on African history and world history. The cases represent a wide range of topics. Each volume summarizes the state of knowledge on a particular subject for a student who is new to the field. However, the aim is not simply to present views of the literature; it is also to introduce debates on historiographical or substantive issues, and it may argue for a particular point of view. The aim of the series is to stimulate debate, to challenge students and general readers. The series is not committed to any particular school of thought.

Other books in the series:

Africa Since 1940, by Frederick Cooper

Muslim Societies in African History, by David Robinson

Acknowledgments

I am indebted to a number of persons who gave of their time and expertise to help shape this project. I thank Martin Klein, who approached me with the idea of writing this book, and who patiently read through several drafts. Colin Palmer also read drafts, as did Kathleen Phillips-Lewis. Their comments, suggestions, and criticisms were extremely important. There were other readers whose names were not revealed to me; I thank them as well. Of course, all errors of fact and interpretation are solely mine.

I wish to thank those NYU graduate students who have studied with me, and with whom I have studied. These include Tanya Huelett, Edwina Ashie-Nikoi, Njoroge Njoroge, Aisha Finch, Natasha Lightfoot, Hillina Seife, Seth Markle, Michaela Harrison, Amir al-Islam, Marc Goulding, Alexis Doster, Oghenetoja Okoh, Yuko Miki, and Michelle Thompson; we have enjoyed spirited discussions about the African Diaspora, both in and out of class, and I have been the major benefactor. I look forward to great tomes from each of you, and of a quality that far exceeds my own.

I owe a special debt of gratitude to my Spelman College family, who continue to model the study of the Diaspora, and with whom I share a vital bond.

I also want to acknowledge the friendship and support of Sterling Stuckey. Our continuous dialogue has contributed significantly to my thinking.

My wife Mary and our daughters, Sonya, Candace, and Jamila, remain my principal supporters and dedicated companions along this way. I owe them all my love and appreciation.

As always, I give praise to the Almighty.
