Introduction: characterization and illustration of Creativity Templates
1

Part I
Theoretical framework

1 Codes of Product Evolution – a Source for Ideation
13

- Market-based vs. product-based information
  13
- Sources of information for new products
  13
- Critical evaluation of market-based information at the micro level:
  - limitations of current product users
    16
- Critical evaluation of market-based information at the macro level:
  - the diffusion of awareness about a new idea
    17
- Implications of the S-shaped curve analysis
  21
- A proposition, a derivative and a dilemma
  22
- Information inherent in the product reflects market needs
  23
- The value of market research reconsidered
  26
- References
  27

2 Revisiting the View of Creativity
29

- Operational definition of creativity
  29
- Igniting the “creative spark”
  30
- Typology of research streams: the creative person, process and idea
  31
- Balancing surprise and regularity
  35
3 A Critical Review of Popular Creativity-Enhancement Methods

Part II The Creativity Templates

4 The Attribute Dependency Template

An antenna in the snow – a detailed illustration 59
A disadvantage turned into an advantage 62
Generalization of the Attribute Dependency Template – an innovative lipstick 62
The basic principle of Attribute Dependency 63
How to compete with “Domino’s Pizza” – a hypothetical case 66
Making a better candle 71
Are accidents necessary for locating ideas for new products? 73
Attribute Dependency – between attributes vs. within attributes dependency 74
Cycles of dependencies 75

6 The Replacement Template

What is the Replacement Template? 99
Implementation of the Replacement Template 104
Case study 1 – a chair 109
Case study 2 – a scanner 114
Case study 3 – butter patties 116
When is exclusion appropriate? 119
Case study 4 – Nike-Air® ads 119
Case study 5 – Bally shoe ads 122
Replacement vs. Attribute Dependency 122
Operational prescription 123

7 The Displacement Template

What is the Displacement Template? 124
Displacement is not unbundling 127
Implementation of the Displacement Template 128
Observations on the Displacement Template 130
Operational prescription 132

Part IV Validation of the Templates theory

11 Demarcating the Creativity Templates

Mapping research: toward a product-based framework for Templates definition

Can Templates explain and predict the emergence of blockbuster products?

Can training in Templates improve creativity and quality of product ideas?

How effective are the Templates?

How effective is the Attribute Dependency Template?
