

Contents

Preface [ix]

References to Tippett's scores and essays [xv]

- 1 'Only half rebelling': tonal strategies, folksong and 'Englishness' [1]
 in Tippett's Concerto for Double String Orchestra
 DAVID CLARKE
- 2 From pastiche to free composition: R. O. Morris, Tippett and the development of pitch resources in the Fantasia Concertante on a Theme of Corelli
 ANTHONY POPE
- 3 'Is there a choice at all?' King Priam and motives for analysis [55]
 ARNOLD WHITTALL
- 4 Tippett's Second Symphony, Stravinsky and the language of [78]
 neoclassicism: towards a critical framework
 KENNETH GLOAG
- 5 Tippett, sequence and metaphor [95]
 CHRISTOPHER MARK
- 6 Tonal elements and their significance in Tippett's Sonata No. 3 [117]
 for Piano
 ALASTAIR BORTHWICK
- 7 'Significant gestures to the past': formal processes and visionary [145]
 moments in Tippett's Triple Concerto
 STEPHEN COLLISON
- 8 Tippett's King Priam and 'the tragic vision' [166]
 ROWENA POLLARD AND DAVID CLARKE
- 9 Tippett at the millennium: a personal memoir [186]
 WILFRID MELLERS
- 10 Decline or renewal in late Tippett? The Fifth String Quartet [200]
 in perspective
 PETER WRIGHT

Appendix: glossary of terms used in pitch-class set theory [223]

Index [225]