

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914

Martin Daunton

Frontmatter

More information

Trusting Leviathan

Martin Daunton's major study of the politics of taxation in the 'long nineteenth century' examines the complex financial relationship between the state and its citizens. Around 1800, taxes stood at 20 per cent of national income; by the outbreak of the First World War, they had fallen to less than half of their previous level. The process of fiscal containment resulted in a high level of trust in the financial rectitude of the government and in the equity of the tax system, contributing to the political legitimacy of the British state in the second half of the nineteenth century. As a result, the state was able to fund the massive enterprises of war and welfare in the twentieth century. Combining new research with a comprehensive survey of existing knowledge, this lucid and wide-ranging book represents a major contribution to our understanding of Victorian and Edwardian Britain.

Martin Daunton is a fellow of Churchill College and professor of economic history at the University of Cambridge. He is the author of Progress and Poverty: An Economic and Social History of Britain, 1700-1850 (1995), and editor of Volume III of The Cambridge Urban History of Britain (2000).

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914
Martin Daunt
Frontmatter
More information

Frontispiece: 'Guides to truth', Punch 22 September 1909. The cartoon refers to the 'People's budget' of 1909. At the rear, the leader of the Conservatives, Arthur Balfour, is amending a sandwich board carried by Herbert Asquith, the Liberal prime minister. At the front, the former Liberal prime minister, Lord Rosebery, announces his opposition to the budget.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914

Martin Daunton

Frontmatter

More information

Trusting Leviathan

The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914

Martin Daunton

University of Cambridge

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914

Martin Daunton

Frontmatter

More information

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge, New York, Melbourne, Madrid, Cape Town, Singapore, São Paulo

Cambridge University Press

The Edinburgh Building, Cambridge CB2 8RU, UK

Published in the United States of America by Cambridge University Press, New York

www.cambridge.org

Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9780521803724

© Martin Daunton, 2001

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2001

This digitally printed version 2007

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloguing in Publication data

Daunton, M. J. (Martin J.)

Trusting leviathan: the politics of taxation in Britain, 1799-1914 /

Martin Daunton.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 0 521 80372 1

1. Income tax – Great Britain – History. 2. Fiscal policy – Great Britain –
History. I. Title.

HJ4707 .D35 2001

336.2'00941 – dc21 2001025946

ISBN 978-0-521-80372-4 hardback

ISBN 978-0-521-03748-8 paperback

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914
Martin Daunton
Frontmatter
More information

Contents

List of illustrations	page vii
List of figures	viii
List of tables	ix
Preface	x
List of abbreviations	xiii
1 Trust, collective action and the state	I
2 ‘The great tax eater’: the limits of the fiscal-military state, 1799–1842	32
3 ‘Philosophical administration and constitutional control’: the emergence of the Gladstonian fiscal constitution	58
4 ‘A cheap purchase of future security’: establishing the income tax, 1842–1860	77
5 ‘Our real war chest’: the national debt, war and empire	109
6 ‘The sublime rule of proportion’: ability to pay and the social structure, 1842–1906	136
7 ‘The minimum of irritation’: fiscal administration and civil society, 1842–1914	180
8 ‘The right of a dead hand’: death and taxation	224
9 ‘Athenian democracy’: the fiscal system and the local state, 1835–1914	256
10 ‘The end of our taxation tether’: the limits of the Gladstonian fiscal constitution, 1894–1906	302

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914
Martin Daunton
Frontmatter
More information

vi	Contents
II	‘The modern income tax’: remaking the fiscal constitution, 1906–1914	330
12	Conclusion	375
	Appendix: chancellors of the Exchequer, 1841–1914	391
	Bibliography	393
	Index	419

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914
Martin Daunton
Frontmatter
More information

Illustrations

Frontispiece: ‘Guides to truth’, Punch 22 September 1909 (Middlegate Prints)	page ii
1 Cartoon from the cover of State of the Nation , 1829 (British Museum)	48
2 ‘A political parallel’, Punch October 1842 (Middlegate Prints)	62
3 ‘Indirect taxation’, Punch May 1842 (Middlegate Prints)	162
4 ‘Hamlet and the skull’, Punch 12 May 1894 (Middlegate Prints)	247
5 ‘Depressed dukes’, Punch 30 June 1894 (Middlegate Prints)	254
6 ‘Tax land not food’: poster reprinted from the Morning Star newspaper (Victoria and Albert Museum)	340
7 ‘Forced fellowship’, Punch 27 October 1909 (Middlegate Prints)	350

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914
Martin Daunton
Frontmatter
More information

Figures

1.1	Total government expenditure as a percentage of gross national and domestic product, United Kingdom, 1790-1937	page 23
2.1	Categories of tax revenue as a percentage of all tax revenues, central government of Britain and United Kingdom, 1696-1700 to 1910-14	34
2.2	Debt charges as a percentage of gross expenditure of United Kingdom central government, 1810-1913	49
2.3	Funded and unfunded debt, United Kingdom, £m, 1810-1913	49
4.1	Rate and yield of income tax, 1842/3 to 1913/14	102
10.1	Major categories of customs and excise duties, United Kingdom, 1890/1	306
11.1	Principal categories of tax revenue, United Kingdom central government, 1890/1, 1898/9, 1901/2, 1905/6 and 1913/14	359
11.2	National taxes (indirect and direct) as a percentage of incomes of married men with two children	371

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914
Martin Daunton
Frontmatter
More information

Tables

1.1	Total government expenditure as a percentage of gross national and domestic product, United Kingdom, 1790–1937	page 23
2.1	Structure of tax revenue of the central government, Britain and United Kingdom, 1696–1700 to 1910–14 (percentage)	35
2.2	Taxes collected for central government, 1690–1820	43
5.1	Aggregate net liabilities of the state, 1840–1890	123
6.1	Number of persons charged to schedule D of the income tax, United Kingdom, 1854 and 1868	160
6.2	Changes in the structure of income tax, 1842–1905	160
6.3	Direct and indirect taxes, collected by central government, United Kingdom, 1841/2 to 1901/2 (percentage)	166
7.1	Income tax schedules	185
7.2	Net receipt from income tax by schedule, United Kingdom, 1855/6 and 1910/11 (per cent)	187
8.1	Death duties prior to the reforms of 1894	228
11.1	Major fiscal changes of the Liberal government	361
11.2	Taxation of married man with three children under sixteen as a percentage of income	370

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914

Martin Daunt

Frontmatter

More information

Preface

The initial idea for a book on the politics of taxation in Britain, from the late eighteenth century to the present, came from David Cannadine and John Morrill. At the end of a protracted period of research and writing, I still remain grateful for their suggestion that I should tackle the subject. Their original idea expanded, for it soon became clear that a considerable amount of archival research was needed in order to make sense of the developments from the First World War through to the Thatcherite reforms. I was fortunate to obtain generous support from the Nuffield Foundation, which awarded me a Social Science Research Fellowship in 1992/3, and from the Humanities Research Board (now the Arts and Humanities Research Board) which provided an additional term of sabbatical leave in 1995/6. I was therefore able to collect a considerable amount of archival material around the country, mainly relating to the period from 1890 to the present. As a result, the initial plan for a short, single volume was abandoned, and the project migrated from Longmans to Cambridge University Press. Both Andrew McLennan and Heather McCallum at Longmans, and Elizabeth Howard and Richard Fisher at Cambridge University Press, were supportive and understanding as the project grew and developed.

The present book provides an overview of the ‘long nineteenth century’, from the initial introduction of the income tax in 1799 during the wars with revolutionary France when taxation amounted to about 20 per cent of the national income, through to the outbreak of the First World War when taxation was about 10 per cent of national income. It is a story of fiscal containment: the level of taxation was reduced and held down to a greater extent and for a longer period of time than in most other European countries. At the same time, the fiscal system widely came to be seen as ‘fair’ and equitable between interests, so helping to create the high level of legitimacy which characterised the British state in the second half of the nineteenth century and into the twentieth century. From 1914, the pattern changes: the level of fiscal extraction rose during the First World War to about 25 per cent of national income, with scarcely any fall

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914

Martin Daunton

Frontmatter

More information

in the 1920s and 1930s; a further increase during the Second World War took taxation to about 40 per cent of national income. The implications of this pattern will be explored in a further book, which considers in detail the demise of what may be termed the Gladstonian fiscal state whose creation is the subject of the current study.

The attempt to make sense of a new and complex topic requires more than time; it needs intellectual debate and discussion to clarify ideas and concepts. I have, again, been particularly fortunate. The intellectual stimulus for this book arose from the writings of two other historians with whom I was in close contact as I was researching and writing the book – Patrick O’Brien and Colin Matthew. Their articles on taxation in the ‘long eighteenth century’ and on Gladstone’s budgets gave me the basis from which to start, and the present book owes much to their pioneering work. The death of Colin Matthew in 1999 shocked and saddened his many friends.

My attempt to make sense of the long-term development of the British tax system was considerably assisted by an invitation to spend three months at the Research School of Social Sciences of the Australian National University in 1994, as part of the programme on ‘Administration, Governability and Compliance’. The comments on the papers I gave there in 1994 at the start of the process of writing, and again in 1996, were of great assistance in shaping my analysis. I am extremely grateful to Professor Patrick Troy of the Research School for his continued generosity and encouragement; and for providing such a congenial environment for interdisciplinary exchange. Of particular help were the comments of two other visitors: Margaret Levi of the University of Washington and Rodney Lowe of the University of Bristol.

The research and much of the writing for this book were undertaken at University College London where my students suffered from my obsession with taxation; they are spared my next obsession by my move to Cambridge. The book was completed at Cambridge, where I have been stimulated by the work of new colleagues, especially Chris Bayly, Eugenio Biagini, Peter Clarke, Boyd Hilton, Craig Muldrew, Jon Parry, Richard Smith, Gareth Stedman Jones, Simon Szreter and Adam Tooze, who have helped to bring together interests in political language, the development of welfare systems, trust, investment in public health, the finance of the empire, economic knowledge, and many other topics. I have benefitted from conversations with David Feldman, Julian Hoppit, Joanna Innes, Paul Janssens, Frank Trentmann and many others who have heard me give too many seminar papers over too long a period of time. Peter Mandler provided a thorough and extremely helpful reading. I am grateful to my Suffolk neighbour, Dave Cole, of middlegateprints.com both

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914

Martin Daunton

Frontmatter

More information

xii Preface

for finding the Punch cartoons and for permission to reproduce them from his collection; and to the British Museum and the Victoria and Albert Museum for permission to reproduce the cartoons of the tax eater state (Ill.1) and ‘Tax land not food’ (Ill.6). The completion of the book was greatly assisted by Chris Beauchamp who compiled the bibliography, by Linda Randall who copy-edited with her usual eye for detail, and by Auriol Griffith-Jones who produced the index.

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-03748-8 - Trusting Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1799-1914
Martin Daunton
Frontmatter
More information

Abbreviations

AMC	Association of Municipal Corporations
BL	British Library
BLPS	British Library of Political and Economic Science
Bod. Lib.	Bodleian Library, Oxford
DNB	Dictionary of National Biography
FRA	Financial Reform Association
FRU	Financial Reform Union
ILP	Independent Labour Party
LCC	London County Council
LGB	Local Government Board
LRC	Labour Representation Committee
LSE	London School of Economics
MBW	Metropolitan Board of Works
NDC	National Debt Commission
NLW	National Library of Wales
PP	Parliamentary Papers
PRO	Public Record Office
SDF	Social Democratic Federation