CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN LINGUISTICS SUPPLEMENTARY VOLUME

The urbanization of rural dialect speakers
A sociolinguistic study in Brazil
In this series

1. David Crystal: Prosodic systems and intonation in English
2. John M. Anderson: The grammar of case
3. M. L. Samuels: Linguistic evolution
4. P. H. Matthews: Inflectional morphology
5. Gillian Brown: Phonological rules and dialect variation
6. Brian Newton: The generative interpretation of dialect
7. R. M. W. Dixon: The Dyirbal language of North Queensland
8. Melissa Bowern: Early syntactic development
9. W. Sidney Allen: Accent and rhythm
10. Peter Trudgill: The social differentiation of English in Norwich
11. Roger Lass and John M. Anderson: Old English phonology
12. Ruth M. Kempson: Presupposition and the delimitation of semantics
13. James R. Hurford: The linguistic theory of numerals
14. Roger Lass: English phonology and phonological theory
15. G. M. Awbery: The syntax of Welsh
17. James Foley: Foundations of theoretical phonology
18. A. Radford: Italian syntax: transformational and relational grammar
19. Dieter Wunderlich: Foundations of linguistics
22. Per Linell: Psychological reality in phonology
23. Christine Tetzlaff: Studies in the acquisition of deictic terms
24. Torben Thrane: Referential–semantic analysis
25. Tamsin Donaldson: Ngiyambaa
26. Kristján Árnason: Quality in historical phonology
27. John Layser: The phonetic description of voice quality
28. Peter Austin: A grammar of Dyirbal, South Australia
29. Alice C. Harris: Georgian syntax
30. Suzanne Romaine: Socio-historical linguistics
31. Martin Atkinson: Explanations in the study of child language development
32. Suzanne Fleischman: The future in thought and language
33. Jenny Cheshire: Variation in an English dialect
34. William A. Foley and Robert D. Van Valin Jr: Functional syntax and universal grammar
35. Michael A. Covington: Syntactic theory in the High Middle Ages
36. Kenneth P. Safir: Syntactic chains
37. J. Miller: Semantics and syntax
38. H. C. Bunt: Mass terms and model-theoretic semantics
39. Heinz J. Giegerich: Metrical phonology and phonological structure

Supplementary Volumes

Brian D. Joseph: The synchrony and diachrony of the Balkan infinitive
Anne Marie Schmidt: Young people's Dyirbal: an example of language death from Australia
John Harris: Phonological variation and change: studies in Hiberno-English
Terence McKay: Infinitival complements in German
Stella Maris Bortoni-Ricardo: The urbanization of rural dialect speakers

* Issued in hard covers and as a paperback
THE URBANIZATION OF RURAL DIALECT SPEAKERS

A sociolinguistic study in Brazil

STELLA MARIS BORTONI-RICARDO

Department of Letters and Linguistics, University of Brasilia
Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-10385-5 - The Urbanization of Rural Dialect Speakers: A Sociolinguistic Study in Brazil
Stella Maris Bortoni-Ricardo
Frontmatter
More information
To the memory of
Maria Aparecida Bortoni
CONTENTS

Acknowledgements ix

1 Introduction 1
Notes to chapter 1 6

2 The sociolinguistic situation in Brazil 8
2.0 Introduction 8
2.1 The Brazilian speech community 8
2.2 Historical background 14
2.3 The Caipira culture 21
Notes to chapter 2 24

3 The Caipira dialect 26
3.0 Introduction 26
3.1 The phonology of the Standard Brazilian Portuguese 27
3.1.1 The vowels 29
3.1.2 The consonants 38
3.1.3 Diphthongs 40
3.2 Aspects of the phonology of the Caipira dialect 41
3.2.1 The tendency towards open syllables 47
3.2.1.1 Falling diphthongs 47
3.2.1.2 Denasalization 52
3.2.1.3 Final consonant deletion 54
3.2.2 The tendency towards paroxytones 56
3.2.2.1 Rising diphthong reduction 56
3.2.2.2 The reduction of the proparoxytones 57
3.2.3 Processes affecting the liquids 58
3.2.4 Sporadic changes of vowels 61
3.2.5 Other phonological processes characteristic of Caipira 63
Notes to chapter 3 65

4 Network analysis: a dynamic model to approach language change 69
4.0 Introduction 69
4.1 The network paradigm 69
4.1.1 The study of communication networks in communities 71
4.1.2 The study of the normative content of the links in social networks 75
4.2 Network analysis applied to sociolinguistics 79
4.2.1 Network as a theoretical construct 79
4.2.2 The social function of close-knit networks 80
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This present book is a revised version of my 1983 doctoral thesis presented to the University of Lancaster. I am deeply indebted to people in Lancaster and in Brasília who have contributed to it, in particular to my supervisors, Roger T. Bell and Christopher N. Candlin. I have also received valuable critiques and comments from Lesley Milroy, Marilyn Martin-Jones, Roberto Cardoso de Oliveira, Lytton Leite Guimarães, Anthony Naro, Antonio Salles, Augustinus Staub, Ulf Baranow and Hildo Couto; and the warm support of Maurício F. Ricardo, Marilda Cavalcanti, Luzia and Luíís de Castro and Maria Helena Kubrusly.

Throughout the development of the work, I had the efficient collaboration of the following research assistants, students of the University of Brasília. For the fieldwork: Ricardo Lobato, Roberto Patrocínio, Márcia Damaso, Bráulio Porto, Aliris dos Santos, Tulia Vogensen and Neuza Carvalho. For the transcription and coding: Nivienie Maciel, Ilza de Borja and Ruth Alves. For the computer processing: Luiz Soares e Maria Inez Walter. Terezinha Bublitz has worked as an efficient secretary during all these stages and also patiently typed this final version.

Thanks are especially due to the following bodies: The Ford Foundation for awarding me the research grant 739.0817.55/62; The Conselho Nacional de Desenvolvimento Científico e Tecnológico - CNPq - for awarding the research grant 40.0778/81 and financing the last year of my graduate studies; The University of Brasília for institutional material support.

My warmest thanks go to my parents, Geraldo and Maria Aparecida and my sister Márcia and to my children Larissa, Clecio José and Ana Karina for their actual help, confidence
x Acknowledgments

and understanding.

Finally, I am very grateful to my informants of Brazlândia who so generously shared with me their thoughts, their food and shelter with my regret that I can help them so little.