

Contents

Preface	vii
PART ONE LOCATION, COMMUNICATION AND THE ORGANISATION
1 Introduction	3
Definitions	5
The organisation and its conceptualisation in industrial geography	6
The organisation and regional development	8
The UK electronics industry	10
The structure of the study	11
2 The structural contingency model of organisations	13
The structural contingency model	13
Environment in the structural contingency model	17
Environment and organisational structure	25
Technology in the structural contingency model	34
Technology and organisational structure	37
Concluding discussion	42
3 The organisation and its external linkages	49
Linkage, location and profit maximising concepts of the organisation	51
Linkage, location and the behavioural concept of the organisation	54
Material linkages and organisational structure	61
(a) Cross-sectional studies of material linkages	62
(b) Linkage change and organisational structure	66
Information flows and organisational structure	70
The enterprise and its spatial environments	77
PART TWO ENVIRONMENT AND ENTERPRISE STRUCTURE IN THE UNITED KINGDOM ELECTRONICS INDUSTRY
4 The electronics industry in the United Kingdom	87
The origins of the British electronics industry	87

vi	Contents
	Products and markets: The electronics environment	92
	Technology, markets and task environment relationships	98
	Location of the industry in the United Kingdom	102
	The survey of electronics enterprises	105
	The data	107
	Corporate attributes of the sample	111
	5 Measuring organisational structure, performance and development	115
	Organisational structure	115
	Organisational performance	120
	Organisational development	122
	Conclusion	130
	6 Defining task environments through linkages and information contacts	132
	The distribution of purchasing and sales linkages	132
	The interaction fields of organisations	141
	Patterns of market communication	145
	The communication fields of Marketing Executives	155
	The texture of communications	159
	Conclusion	163
	7 Towards a spatial model of organisation–environment interaction	166
	The impact of the environmental domain	166
	Specifying the model	167
	The role of organisation size	180
	The organisation in space: Model I, the development component	182
	The organisation in space: Model II, the growth component	189
	Conclusion	194
	8 Summary and conclusions	196
	Organisations and space	198
	Towards a theory of organisations in space	201
	References	205
	Index	221