ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I should like to acknowledge my gratitude and thanks to the very many individuals and institutions, alas too numerous to mention all by name, who have helped me in the preparation of this work over the past twenty-five years. In particular, I should like to thank John Brailsford, former Keeper of the Department of Prehistoric and Romano-British Antiquities in the British Museum, and my present and former colleagues in that department for all their help, stimulus and wise council on many points; Gillian Wilson and Gillian Varndell, who acted successively as my research assistant and shouldered many of the more tedious tasks of checking the catalogue and preparing the detailed distribution maps; Philip Compton and Philip Dean, who executed all the text figures; my wife, Clare, and my secretary, Valerie Ives, who shared the burden of the typing with great fortitude; R. B. K. Stevenson, Audrey Henshall and the staff of the National Museum of Antiquities of Scotland; H. N. Savory, G. Boon, S. Green and the staff of the National Museum of Wales; J. Raftery and the staff of the National Museum of Ireland; the late Percy Heathcote and Messrs C. and E. Grantham who kindly allowed me to browse through their extensive private collections; Edward Martin, who allowed me to examine the unpublished material from his excavations at West Row, Mildenhall; Margaret Smith, Graham Ritchie, and, not least, Frances Lynch who, over the years, supplied, as it seemed, an almost endless series of excellent drawings of her most recent discoveries.

While all the drawings in the catalogue are my own, I am pleased to acknowledge that the following are based upon those prepared by others, either published or kindly supplied as originals:
