INTRODUCTION

1. Posing the problems
2. The approach taken: theoretical framework
3. Results of the investigation
4. Some necessary preliminaries

SYNTACTIC TESTS FOR TERMHOOD

1. Tav-Reflexivization
2. Tavis-Reflexivization
3. Person Agreement
4. Unemphatic Pronoun Drop
5. Summary

CASE MARKING IN SERIES I AND II

1. The case marking differential
2. Evidence for the analysis of case in Series II
3. Case as a test for termhood
Appendix: Constituent screeves of Georgian Series

OBJECT CAMOUFLAGE

1. The facts to be considered
2. An analysis
3. Interaction with some rules previously considered
4. An alternative analysis
5. Object Camouflage as a test for termhood

OBJECT RAISING

1. A description of the data in Georgian
Contents

2. An analysis ............................................. 54
3. Facts concerning the nominative-nominal ..................... 56
4. Facts concerning the infinitive ................................ 60
5. Facts concerning the tevis-nominal ............................. 62
6. Object raising as a test of direct-objecthood .................. 63

5 Causative Clause Union ............................. 66
1. An analysis of organic causatives ........................... 66
2. Initial grammatical relations .................................. 70
3. Derived grammatical relations ............................... 73
4. The tevis-nominal ........................................... 81
5. Theoretical implications ..................................... 85

6 Version: Rules That Create Indirect Objects ............... 87
1. An analysis ............................................. 88
2. Benefactive Version ....................................... 89
3. Stative verbs ............................................. 92
4. Why not generate version objects directly? .................. 93
5. Coreferential Version Object Deletion ....................... 95
6. On so-called four-person verbs .............................. 99
7. Version as relation-changing rules .......................... 100
8. Summary .............................................. 102

7 Passivization .................................... 103
1. The passive from the viewpoint of language universals 104
2. Indirect objects in passives .................................. 110
3. Theoretical issues ......................................... 112
4. Interaction with other rules .................................. 114
5. Conclusion .............................................. 116

8 Inversion ...................................... 117
1. The problem: the case marking differential in Series III 117
2. The proposal: a rule of inversion ............................ 118
3. Preliminary arguments ...................................... 120
4. Inversion verbs ............................................ 127
5. Additional arguments ....................................... 132
6. The form of the rule ........................................ 133
7. Interaction with other rules .................................. 138
8. Summary .............................................. 141

Appendix B: Transitive inversion verbs with no overt subject 144
Contents

9 WHY PATTERN A IS NOT REDUCIBLE TO PATTERN B

1. An analysis of A as a special instance of B  147
2. Arguments against the proposed analysis  147
3. Conclusion  150

10 NON-FINITE VERB FORMS

1. Masdars: gerundives or ‘derived nominals’?  152
2. Infinitive or ‘future participle in the adverbial case’?  154
3. The marking of nominals governed by non-finite verb forms  156
4. The nature of the nominals governed by non-finite verb forms  160

11 RETIRED TERM MARKING

1. Motivating retired termhood  168
2. Correlations between grammatical relations and final marking  170
3. Alternative analyses  175
4. Implications of this analysis  178

12 TRANSITIVITY

1. Analysis  181
2. Causative Clause Union  182
3. Retired Term Marking  184
4. Conclusion and extension  186
5. Transitive and intransitive

Appendix: Real and apparent exceptions to transitivity  187

13 SYNTHETIC PASSIVES

1. Identification of direct, analytic passive and synthetic passive constructions  191
2. Some syntactic-semantic characteristics  195
3. A proposal that accounts for the differences  197
4. Arguments for the initial grammatical relations proposed for synthetic passives  199
5. Arguments for the final grammatical relations proposed for synthetic passives  201
6. Conclusion and extension  202

Appendix: On four ‘passives’ in Georgian  203

14 REFLEXIVIZATION

1. A review of the facts  205
2. A proposal  208
3. An alternative proposal  210

15 Number Agreement

1. Polypersonalism 211
2. First refinement: failure of third person to trigger Number Agreement 213
3. Second refinement: statement on final termhood 215
4. Third refinement: first subjects 216
5. Last refinement: relational hierarchy 218
6. The applicability of rule (18) 220
7. Alternative analyses of Number Agreement 223
8. Conclusions 226

16 The Nature of the Georgian Verb Classes

1. Hypothesis A: The Ergative Hypothesis 228
2. Hypothesis B: The Unaccusative Hypothesis 235
3. Inversion and the Georgian verb classes 247
4. The semantics of Class 249
5. Comparison and conclusions 252
6. Theoretical implications 257
Appendix A: Sample lists of verb classes 259
Appendix B: Ambivalent exceptions 267

Epilogue

1. The grammatical relations ‘subject’, ‘direct object’ and ‘indirect object’ 275
2. Simplifications in case marking 275
3. Retired term marking 277
4. Rule interaction 277
5. Characteristics of grammatical relations 278
