Acknowledgments

I wish to express my thanks to those who have aided me with their assistance and counsel in completing this study. My research in Europe was made possible by a Fellowship for Independent Study and Research from the National Endowment for the Humanities. I also benefited from the help of the staffs at many libraries, but especially the Library of Congress, The British Library, The New York Public Library, the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, the Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz, the Herzog-August-Bibliothek, and the Sächsische Landesbibliothek.

Several colleagues have provided me with valuable advice and criticism touching on all or part of this book. For the earlier sections Professors Gary Tomlinson, Daniel Hertz, and particularly Gudrun Busch have offered penetrating and thought-provoking insights. Mr John Warrack has read an early draft of the entire typescript and contributed fundamentally to improving every chapter of this study. My deepest and most inexpressible debt is to my wife Martha Feldman, who has read every word of what follows with care, perspicacity, and vibrant idealism which has brought home to me the lesson that, even in scholarship, everything perishable is but an image of what we strive for.
