

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-11632-9 - A History of Personality Psychology: Theory, Science, and Research from Hellenism to the Twenty-First Century

Frank Dumont

Table of Contents

More information

Contents

List of tables and figures	page viii
Preface	ix
1 Historical precursors of personality theory	1
2 From illness to wellness models of human nature	35
3 Developmental perspectives on personality: from youth-based to life-span models	75
4 The biology of personality	115
5 Trait theories and the psychology of individual differences	149
6 The puzzle of the self	183
7 Culture and personality	220
8 Gendered personality	258
9 Emotions and reasoning: a definition of the Human	294
10 Taking the measure of the Human: benefits and inherent limitations of personality measures	329
11 Can personality change? The possibilities of psychotherapeutics	371
12 The disordered personality: evolution of nosological systems	407
13 Eight appendices: at the margins of personality psychology	451
References	499
Author index	544
Subject index	549