

CONTENTS

Preface	page ix
Note on the texts	xi
Books on Herder in English	xii
INTRODUCTION:
Herder and Politics	3
Language, Culture and Community	17
Change and Progress	33
SELECTED TEXTS
JOURNAL OF MY VOYAGE IN THE YEAR 1769
(TRAVEL DIARY)	63
I Autobiographical Reflections	63
II The Voyage: Reflections on Myth, Prejudice and the Imagination	71
III The Voyage: Reflections on Social and Political Cultures	86
ESSAY ON THE ORIGIN OF LANGUAGE
Part I. Was it possible for man to invent language solely by his own natural faculties?	117
Part II. How man could and must have invented language in the most appropriate manner	153
YET ANOTHER PHILOSOPHY OF HISTORY	179
Section 1.	181
Section 2.	189
Section 3.	211
DISSERTATION ON THE RECIPROCAL INFLUENCE OF GOVERNMENT AND THE SCIENCES
On the influence of paternal government	225
On the influence of despotic government	231

CONTENTS

On the influence of free constitutions	page 235
On the influence of government on learning after the Renaissance	240
General observations on how the government influences the sciences	244
General remarks on changes in sciences resulting from changes in governments	247
IDEAS FOR A PHILOSOPHY OF THE HISTORY OF MANKIND	253
BOOK III
VI Organic difference between animals and man	255
BOOK IV
I Man is organized with a capacity for reasoning	257
III Man is organized for more complex sense perception, for the exercise of art and the use of language	261
IV Man is organized for finer instincts and hence for freedom	263
VI Man is constituted for humanity (Humanität) and religion	267
BOOK V
II No power in nature is without an organ	272
IV The sphere of human organization is a system of creative mental powers	275
VI The present state of man is probably the connecting link of two worlds	280
BOOK VII
I In spite of considerable differences between men in different parts of the world, there is but one and the same human species	282
II The human species has everywhere been exposed to, and affected by, climatic influences	285
III What is climate? How does it affect man's mind and body?	288

CONTENTS

IV	The genetic force is the mother of all creations on earth: climate can only contribute, favourably or unfavourably	page 291
V	Concluding remarks about the conflict between climate and the genetic force	293
BOOK VIII
I	The sensual nature of man changes in conformity to structural and climatic factors: but . . . it is universally capable of promoting Humanität	297
II	The human imagination is subject to organic and climatic factors, but it is universally guided by tradition	299
III	The practical understanding of man has always developed in accordance with the requirements of his particular way of life: at the same time it is also the blossom of a people's genius and the son of tradition and custom	302
IV	The feelings and strivings of man conform everywhere to his physical organization and the conditions in which he lives: but at the same time they are governed by custom and opinion	304
V	The happiness of man is invariably an individual good	307
BOOK IX
I	Eager though man is to imagine himself self-made, he is nonetheless dependent on others in the development of his capacities	311
III	All the arts and sciences of mankind have evolved through imitation, reason and language	314
IV	Political organization consists of set rules and orders among men, grounded, for the most part, in tradition	317
	Index	327