CAMBRIDGE

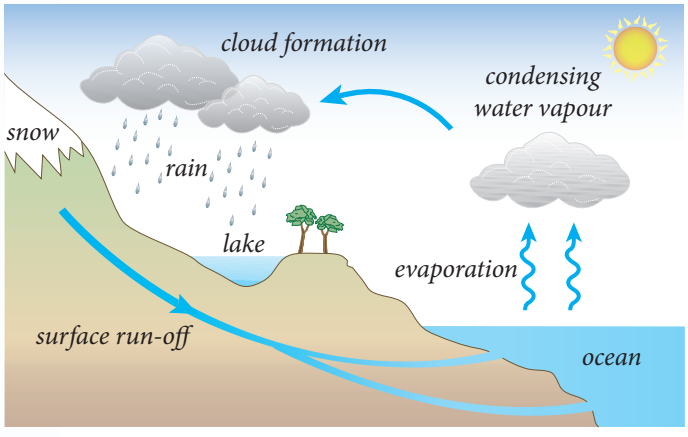
Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-13740-9 - Why do Diamonds Glitter? and Other Questions About Natural Resources
Helen Bethune
Excerpt
More information

Questions about resources

Q: What are resources?

A: Resources are things that are useful or valuable. Water is a resource. So are people, forests, minerals, food and books – in fact, almost anything you can think of that people use can be called a resource.

Resources can be living or non-living. They can be renewable or non-renewable. We cannot use up a renewable resource, as it recycles itself naturally. The water cycle is a good example of this.



the water cycle

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org