The century and a half following the Norman Conquest of 1066 saw an explosion in the writing of Latin and vernacular history in England, while the creation of the romance genre reinvented the fictional narrative. Where critics have seen these developments as part of a cross-Channel phenomenon, Laura Ashe argues that a genuinely distinctive character can be found in the writings of England during the period. Drawing on a wide range of historical, legal and cultural contexts, she discusses how writers addressed the Conquest and rebuilt their sense of identity as a new, united ‘English’ people, with their own national literature and culture, in a manner which was to influence all subsequent medieval English literature. This study opens up new ways of reading post-Conquest texts in relation to developments in political and legal history, and in terms of their place in the English Middle Ages as a whole.

Laura Ashe is Lecturer in English at Queen Mary, University of London.
This series of critical books seeks to cover the whole area of literature written in the major medieval languages – the main European vernaculars, and medieval Latin and Greek – during the period c.1100–1500. Its chief aim is to publish and stimulate fresh scholarship and criticism on medieval literature, special emphasis being placed on understanding major works of poetry, prose, and drama in relation to the contemporary culture and learning which fostered them.

Recent titles in the series

Maura Nolan John Lydgate and the Making of Public Culture
Nicolette Zeeman Piers Plowman and the Medieval Discourse of Desire
Anthony Bale The Jew in the Medieval Book: English Antisemitisms 1300–1500
Robert J. Meyer-Lee Poets and Power from Chaucer to Wyatt
Isabel Davis Writing Masculinity in the Later Middle Ages
John M. Fyler Language and the Declining World in Chaucer, Dante and Jean de Meun
Matthew Giancarlo Parliament and Literature in Late Medieval England
D. H. Green Women Readers in the Middle Ages
Mary Dove The First English Bible: The Text and Context of the Wycliffite Versions
Jenni Nuttall The Creation of Lancastrian Kingship: Literature, Language and Politics in Late Medieval England
Laura Ashe Fiction and History in England, 1066–1200

A complete list of titles in the series can be found at the end of the volume.
FICTION AND HISTORY IN ENGLAND, 1066–1200

LAURA ASHE
for my father, and for his
Ad uos igitur iam loquar qui in tercio millenario eritis... Nunc autem qui tanto tempore antequam nascamini de uobis mentionem iam uestro tempore puluis in hoc opere feci, si contigerit - quod valde desiderat anima mea - uestras ut in manus hoc opus meum prodeat, precor ut Dei clementiam inexcogitabilem pro me miserrimo exoreis.

Henry of Huntingdon
Contents

Acknowledgements ix
Abbreviations x
Illustrations xii

Introduction 1

1 The Normans in England: a question of place 28
   The Bayeux Tapestry: performative text 35
   The Roman de Rou: a Norman myth? 49
   The end of Normanitas, the uses of the Britons, and the rise of Engleterre 55
   The Roman de Rou: le fait n’a jamais qu’une existence linguistique 64

2 ‘Nos Engleis’: war, chronicle, and the new English 81
   The historical context: localism evolving into nationalism 94
   Fantosme’s nationalism: land and people 97
   Form and genre: innovation and its implications 105
   Fantosme’s Chronicle: sacred history 114

3 Historical romance: a genre in the making 121
   The Roman d’Eneas: the birth of romance 124
   Insular ‘romance’? The Romance of Horn 146

4 The English in Ireland: ideologies of race 159
   Gerald of Wales: clerical historiography 166
   The Song and secular history: chaotic narrative 180
   Saint Patrick’s Purgatory: H. de Saltrey’s Tractatus and Marie de France 194

Epilogue 205
Bibliography
Primary texts
Secondary works
Index
Acknowledgements

This project began life as a doctoral dissertation made possible by the Arts & Humanities Research Board. It was adapted during a Research Fellowship at Gonville & Caius College, Cambridge, and completed at Queen Mary, University of London. I would like to thank Judy Weiss, Helen Cooper, Rosalind Field, and John Gillingham, all of whom read the original thesis and gave me invaluable feedback. Stephen Baxter has given constant, generous and expert advice; and for their various acts of kindness I owe a debt of gratitude to Jocelyn Wogan-Browne, Kevin Taylor, Matthew Strickland, John Spence, James Simpson, Ian Short, Derek Pearsall, Máire Ni Mhaonaigh, Chris Lewis, Carola Hicks, Seaton Gordon, Neil Cartlidge, Julia Boffey, Jean Blacker, Rick Bell, and David Baxter. I am also deeply indebted to the anonymous readers appointed by the Press, and to Alastair Minnis, the General Editor.

This book exists, in large measure, because of the nurturing of my undergraduate teachers Jeremy Prynne and Colin Burrow, for whom my gratitude and regard are unbounded.

And I am sustained, in this as in all things, by my family.

Laura Ashe
London, 2007
Abbreviations

ABBREVIATED REFERENCES

Dean, ANL: Ruth J. Dean, with Maureen B. M. Boulton, Anglo-Norman Literature: a guide to texts and manuscripts ANTS OPS 3 (London, 1999)

Abbreviations

Roger of Howden, Chronica: Chronica Rogeri de Houeden, ed. by William Stubbs, 4 vols. (London, 1868–71)

Illustrations

Fig. 1: Harold returning from Normandy. Detail from the Bayeux Tapestry, Musée de la Tapisserie, Bayeux, France with special authorization of the city of Bayeux, and the Bridgeman Art Library. 39

Fig. 2: St Pachomius receiving the Easter Tables. British Library, Cotton MS Caligula A.XV, fol. 122v. With special permission from the British Library. 41

Fig. 3: Harold’s oath to William. Detail from the Bayeux Tapestry, Musée de la Tapisserie, Bayeux, France with special authorization of the city of Bayeux, and the Bridgeman Art Library. 42

Fig. 4: Edward the Confessor’s death. Detail from the Bayeux Tapestry, Musée de la Tapisserie, Bayeux, France with special authorization of the city of Bayeux, and the Bridgeman Art Library. 46

Translation policy

Where translations have been cited in the notes, they have been used, with some alterations as indicated. Where none is cited, translations are my own.