THE NEIGHBORHOODS OF AUGUSTAN ROME

This volume investigates the neighborhoods of ancient Rome during the reign of the first Roman emperor, Caesar Augustus (27 B.C.E.–14 C.E.). Focusing on a group of neighborhood-based voluntary associations that were important political and social communities for the city’s diverse population of slaves and ex-slaves, it locates the Augustan neighborhoods within the broader context of the history of Rome. John Bert Lott stresses their importance as physical and cultural divisions of the city and investigates the distinctive relationship between local neighborhoods and Augustus himself. An interdisciplinary study that makes use of archaeological, epigraphic, and topographic evidence, this book makes an important contribution to our knowledge of the urban life of Rome’s lower classes and to our understanding of the imperial ideology that supported the development of the dynastic Roman monarchy.

John Bert Lott is assistant professor of classics at Vassar College.
Parentibus
CONTENTS

List of Figures and Tables  page ix
Abbreviations  xi
Acknowledgments  xiii

1 Introducing Neighborhoods at Rome and Elsewhere  1
   Neighborhoods at Rome  4
   Defining Neighborhoods  12
      Defining Vici in Ancient Rome  13
   Neighborhoods in Modern Thought  18
   Voluntary Associations  24
   Conclusion  25

2 Neighborhoods in the Roman Republic  28
   Dionysius of Halicarnassus and Neighborhood Religion  30
   The Middle Republic  37
   The Late Republic  45
      Social Disaffection, Populares, and Community Action  45
      Magistri Vici and Collegia Compitalicia  51
   Neighborhoods in the Final Years of the Republic  55
   Conclusion  59

3 Republic to Empire  61
   Julius Caesar  61
   The Triumvirate  65
   The Augustan Principate Before 7 B.C.E.  67
   A Statue for Mercurius on the Esquiline  73
CONTENTS

4 The Reforms of Augustus
   The Mechanics of Reform 81
   The Ideology of Reform 84
   Neighborhood Religion 98
   Emperor and Neighborhood 106
   Conclusion 117

5 The Artifacts of Neighborhood Culture
   Think Globally, Act Locally 128
   Altars in the Neighborhoods
      Altar from the Vicus Statae Matris 136
      Vatican Inventory 311 137
      Altar of the Vicus Aesculeti 140
      Altar of the Vicus Sandaliarius 142
      Ara Augusta of Lucretius Zethus 144
   Two Augustan Neighborhoods
      Vicus Compiti Acili 148
      Vicus of the Fasti Magistrorum Vici 152
   Numerius Lucius Hermeros 161
   Some Other Dedications and Magistri 165
   Conclusion 168

6 Conclusion
   Conclusion 172

Appendix. Compital Dedications by Year
   Augustan Dedications 180
   Post Augustan Dedications 181
   Restorations of Augustan Compital Shrines 203
   Unknown Date but Certainly Augustan and Compital 206
   Unknown Date but Possibly Augustan and Compital 209
   Monuments Relevant to the Study of the Augustan Neighborhoods 213

Notes 221
Reference List 239
Index: Neighborhood Officers by Name 257
General Index 259
FIGURES AND TABLES

Thanks are especially due to the Deutsches Archäologisches Institut Rom, the Soprintendenza Archeologica di Roma (Museo Nazionale Romano), and the Soprintendenza Archeologica delle province di Napoli e Caserta (Museo Archeologico Nazionale di Napoli) for kindly providing photographs and permissions.

FIGURES

1 Map of Augustan Rome showing the new fourteen regions. 3
2 The Vicus Stablarius on the Severan Marble Plan. 16
3 Possible compital shrine on the Severan Marble Plan. 17
4 Base for the Lares Augusti given to the Vicus Censori by four ministri vici primi in 7 B.C.E. 71
5 Inscription recording Augustus’ gift of a statue of Volcanus to some neighborhood near the Forum in 9 B.C.E. 75
6 Map showing the area around the neighborhood that received the statue of Mercurius in 10 B.C.E., including the Porticus Liviae. 77
7 Fasti from a vicus below the southwest slope of the Aventine. 94
8 The Belvedere altar. Face showing Augustus distributing statuettes of the Lares Augusti to magistri vici. 105
9 Base for statues of the Lares Publici given by Augustus to a neighborhood on the Palatine in 4 B.C.E. 122
10 Map showing the route of the Sacra Via across the Palatine. 123
FIGURES AND TABLES

11 Altar for the Lares Augusti given to the Vicus Statae Matris by four ministri vici. 139
12 Altar for the Lares Augusti and Genii Caesarem (?) given to a neighborhood by four magistri vici primi in 7 B.C.E. 141
13 Altar for the Lares Augusti given to the Vicus Aesculeti by four magistri vici. 142
14 Altar for the Lares Augusti given to the Vicus Sandaliarius by four magistri vici in 2 B.C.E. 145
15 Inscribed tablet recording an ara augusta dedicated by L. Lucretius Zethus in 1 C.E. 147
16 Reconstruction of the Augustan aedicula at the Compitum Acili. 151
17 District around the FMV, including the “schola” (circled), the Horrea Galbana, and the Porticus Aemilia. 153
18 Fragment of a calendar from Rome with the heading “MAG II.” 157
19 Plaque from a compital dedication to Volcanus Quietus Augustus and Stata Mater Augusta in year five of the Vicus Aramilustri. 167

TABLES

1 Known magistri vici from the reign of Augustus. 92
2 Number of dedications by neighborhood officers per year. 124
Abbreviations for periodicals follow those of the American Journal of Archaeology (1991: 95.4–16) and L’Année Philologique. In addition the following abbreviations are used throughout.

AE
L’Année épigraphique. 1888–.

CIL

CAR

Diz. Ep.

FUM

FUR

Helbig‡

ILMN

ILS
ABBREVIATIONS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Abbreviation</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>NS</td>
<td>Notizie degli Scavi di Antichità. 1886–.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book was initially conceived as a first “new project” after graduate school – an article or short series of articles at most. As such projects do, it became more.

It would be impossible, because of limitations of space and the reader’s attention, to acknowledge by name all the colleagues, scholars, and friends who have contributed to my study. I must mention Ann Kuttner and Bob Palmer, who have in different ways left marks on many pages and saved me from many an error. All mistakes that remain are my own.

Both the Research Committee and the Classics Department at Vassar College provided financial assistance whenever requested. My colleagues in Classics provided other, more intangible, support through their friendship, advice, and interest.

My greatest thanks go to Jane Livingston for her constant love, understanding, patience, and support. This book is dedicated to my parents, John and Sandra Lott, whose generosity and love have never failed.