

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bülow

Frontmatter

More information

---

Building Transnational Networks

Building Transnational Networks tells the story of how a large and diverse group of civil society organizations joined forces to contest free trade negotiations in the Americas. Based on qualitative research and social network analysis carried out in Brazil, Chile, Mexico, Peru, the United States, and Canada, it presents original data on twenty years of collective action within and across national boundaries. The author shows that the most effective transnational actors have strong domestic roots and that “Southern” organizations are key actors in trade protest networks. Such networks remain vulnerable to changes in national political contexts and to tensions stemming from enduring asymmetries among actors. These findings offer new understandings of the challenges of transnational collective action.

Marisa von Bülow is professor of political science and Vice-Director of the Political Science Institute at the University of Brasilia, Brazil. She is the author of numerous book chapters as well as articles in journals published in the United States, Europe, and Latin America. Professor von Bülow holds a Ph.D. from the Johns Hopkins University and has conducted research throughout the Americas, including in Argentina, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Mexico, Paraguay, Peru, the United States, and Uruguay.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bulow

Frontmatter

More information

Cambridge Studies in Contentious Politics

Editors

Mark Beissinger Princeton University

Jack A. Goldstone George Mason University

Michael Hanagan Vassar College

Doug McAdam Stanford University and Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences

Suzanne Staggenborg University of Pittsburgh

Sidney Tarrow Cornell University

Charles Tilly (d. 2008)

Elisabeth J. Wood Yale University

Deborah Yashar Princeton University

Ronald Aminzade et al., Silence and Voice in the Study of Contentious Politics
 Javier Auyero, Routine Politics and Violence in Argentina: The Gray Zone of State Power

Clifford Bob, The Marketing of Rebellion: Insurgents, Media, and International Activism

Charles Brockett, Political Movements and Violence in Central America

Christian Davenport, Media Bias, Perspective, and State Repression: The Black Panther Party

Gerald F. Davis, Doug McAdam, W. Richard Scott, and Mayer N. Zald, Social Movements and Organization Theory

Jack A. Goldstone, editor, States, Parties, and Social Movements

Joseph E. Luders, The Civil Rights Movement and the Logic of Social Change

Doug McAdam, Sidney Tarrow, and Charles Tilly, Dynamics of Contention

Sharon Nepstad, War Resistance and the Plowshares Movement

Kevin J. O'Brien and Lianjiang Li, Rightful Resistance in Rural China

Silvia Pedraza, Political Disaffection in Cuba's Revolution and Exodus

Eduardo Silva, Challenging Neoliberalism in Latin America

Sarah A. Soule, Contention and Corporate Social Responsibility

Sidney Tarrow, The New Transnational Activism

Ralph Thaxton, Jr., Catastrophe and Contention in Rural China: Mao's Great Leap Forward Famine and the Origins of Righteous Resistance in Da Fo Village

Charles Tilly, Contentious Performances

Charles Tilly, The Politics of Collective Violence

Charles Tilly, Contention and Democracy in Europe, 1650–2000

Stuart A. Wright, Patriots, Politics, and the Oklahoma City Bombing

Deborah Yashar, Contesting Citizenship in Latin America: The Rise of Indigenous Movements and the Postliberal Challenge

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bülow

Frontmatter

More information

Building Transnational Networks

---

CIVIL SOCIETY AND THE POLITICS OF TRADE IN THE AMERICAS

MARISA VON BÜLOW

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of
Trade in the Americas
Marisa von Bülow
Frontmatter
More information

---

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS
Cambridge, New York, Melbourne, Madrid, Cape Town, Singapore,
São Paulo, Delhi, Dubai, Tokyo, Mexico City

Cambridge University Press
32 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10013-2473, USA
www.cambridge.org
Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9780521191562

© Marisa von Bülow 2010

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2010

Printed in the United States of America

A catalog record for this publication is available from the British Library.

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication data

Von Bülow, Marisa.

Building transnational networks : civil society and the politics of trade in the Americas / Marisa von Bülow.

p. cm. – (Cambridge studies in contentious politics)

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-0-521-19156-2 (hardback)

1. Free trade–Social aspects–America. 2. Civil society–America.

I. Title. II. Series.

HF1745.V65 2010

382'.71097–dc22 2010021483

ISBN 978-0-521-19156-2 Hardback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party Internet Web sites referred to in this publication and does not guarantee that any content on such Web sites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of
Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bulow

Frontmatter

More information

---

To Carlos and Luisa

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bulow

Frontmatter

More information

Contents

List of Figures	page xiii
List of Tables	xiv
Acknowledgments	xvii

Part One Civil Society Organizations and Their Pathways to Transnationality

1. INTRODUCTION	3
What Is Transnational Collective Action?	5
Why Trade?	9
Why the Americas?	10
Researching Networks in Political Contexts	13
Disclaimers and Main Arguments	16
The Plan of the Book	18
2. MULTIPLE PATHWAYS TO TRANSNATIONALITY	20
The National in Transnational Collective Action	22
Pathways to Transnationality	25

Part Two The Politicization of Trade

3. THE CONTENTIOUS NATURE OF TRADE DEBATES	39
The Creation of a Global Trade Regime and Civil Society Participation	42
4. NEW REGIONALISM IN THE AMERICAS	49
Different Civil Society Responses to NAFTA and MERCOSUR	51
Lessons from NAFTA and MERCOSUR	63

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bulow

Frontmatter

More information

Contents

Part Three The Dynamics of Networks

- |           |   |     |
|-----------|---|-----|
| 5. | TRADE PROTEST NETWORKS                                      | 67  |
|           | Who Are Your Closest Allies?                                | 69  |
|           | Who Are Your Closest Allies in Other Countries?             | 76  |
| 6. | THE ORIGINS AND DYNAMICS OF TRADE CHALLENGERS' NETWORKS     | 81  |
|           | The Power of Labor Organizations and Its Limits             | 81  |
|           | “We Want Our Own Space”: The Rise of Rural Transnationalism | 92  |
|           | The Potential Brokerage Roles of NGOs                       | 103 |
|           | The Strength of Missing Ties                                | 112 |

Part Four Organizational Pathways to Transnationality

- |           |  |     |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 7. | THE CREATION AND DEMISE OF TRANSNATIONAL COALITIONS  | 117 |
|           | Campaign and Affiliation Coalition-Building Modes  | 118 |
|           | The Creation of the Hemispheric Social Alliance  | 121 |
|           | The Continental Campaign against the FTAA  | 128 |
| 8. | DIFFUSION AND DIFFERENTIATION OF NATIONAL COALITIONS   | 131 |
|           | The Cases of RMALC in Mexico and the ACJR in Chile   | 133 |
|           | Coalition Building in the United States and Brazil: Different Pathways within the Same Country | 142 |
|           | National Coalitions: From Gateways to Gatekeepers?   | 149 |

Part Five The Search for Ideational Pathways

- |            |  |     |
|------------|--|-----|
| 9.  | ALTERNATIVES FOR THE AMERICAS  | 155 |
|            | Mechanisms and Ideational Pathways   | 158 |
|            | The Sovereignty Dilemma  | 161 |
| 10. | TRANSNATIONAL COLLECTIVE ACTION IN DYNAMIC POLITICAL CONTEXTS                  | 176 |
|            | Transnational Collective Action and Political Systems                          | 179 |
|            | Are New Opportunities for Domestic Action New Threats to Transnational Action? | 186 |

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bulow

Frontmatter

More information

Contents

11. CONCLUSIONS: AGENCY, NETWORKS, AND COLLECTIVE ACTION	190
The National Dimension	190
The Asymmetry Dimension	193
Have Trade Agreements Gone Too Far?	196
Main Abbreviations Used	201
Appendix A: Lists of Interviews	207
Appendix B: Social Network Questionnaire (United States)	219
Bibliography	235
Index	251

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bulow

Frontmatter

More information

Figures

2.1	Four Pathways to Transnationality	page 26
2.2	Organizational Pathways to Transnationality	28
2.3	Ideational Pathways to Transnationality	33
3.1	NGOs Eligible to Attend WTO Ministerials	46
5.1	Closest Allies: Brazil	70
5.2	Closest Allies: Chile	70
5.3	Closest Allies: Mexico	71
5.4	Closest Allies: United States	71
5.5	Transnational Ties among Most Nominated (> 5%) CSOs	78
6.1	Closest Ties among Selected Labor Federations (Brazil, Chile, Mexico, and the United States)	87
6.2	Closest Ties among Selected Rural Organizations (Brazil, Chile, Mexico, and the United States)	97
7.1	Two Decades of Coalition Building on Trade in the Americas, 1986–2006	120
7.2	Organizational Pathways to Transnationality on Trade in the Americas	121
7.3	Members of the HSA Hemispheric Council (2006)	124
8.1	Gateways Used by Mexican CSOs to Reach U.S. CSOs	141
8.2	Gateways Used by Chilean CSOs to Reach U.S. CSOs	141
8.3	Gateways Used by U.S. CSOs to Reach Mexican CSOs	145
8.4	Gateways Used by Brazilian CSOs to Reach U.S. CSOs	150
9.1	Ideational Pathways to Transnationality on Trade in the Americas	160

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bulow

Frontmatter

More information

Tables

4.1	Issues on the Agenda of Selected Agreements (1989–2006)	page 52
5.1	Distribution of Organizations in the Closest Allies' Networks, According to In-Degree	73
5.2	Civil Society Organizations Most Often Nominated by Others as Their Closest Allies in Trade Mobilizations	74
5.3	Density of the Networks, within and across Types of Organizations	75
5.4	Most Often Nominated CSOs in Transnational Network of Closest Allies (> 10%)	77
5.5	Transnational Ties: Density of Ties within and across Types of Organizations	79
6.1	Main National Labor Federations in the Trade Debates (2004)	85
6.2	Rural Organizations' Participation in Trade Debates – Main Challengers from Brazil, Chile, Mexico, and the United States (2004)	99
6.3	Selected Multi-Issue NGOs in Trade Challengers' Networks (2004)	105
8.1	Main Affiliation-Based Trade Coalitions in Brazil, Chile, Mexico, and the United States	133
8.2	Coalitions Most Often Named as Closest Allies in Brazil, Chile, Mexico, and the United States	134

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bulow

Frontmatter

More informationTables

9.1	“Alternatives for the Americas”: Main Topics and Proposals in Two Versions (1998, 2005)	168
A1	Total Number of Interviews, by Type of Interview, Number of Individuals, and Number of Civil Society Organizations	208
A2	Organizations That Answered the Social Network Questionnaire in Brazil between February and May 2005	208
A3	Organizations That Answered the Social Network Questionnaire in Chile between May and June 2005	209
A4	Organizations That Answered the Social Network Questionnaire in Mexico in August 2004 and August 2005	210
A5	Organizations That Answered the Social Network Questionnaire in the United States between May 2004 and January 2006	211
A6	Semistructured and In-Depth Interviews, by Country Where the Interview Was Conducted, Name, Affiliation, City, and Date	212

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bulow

Frontmatter

More information

Acknowledgments

I became interested in the general questions put forward in this book twenty years ago. I met some of the key informants that feature in it quite early, at a time when they were just beginning to think in transnational terms about their own work and their organizations. The opportunity I had to witness the many ways in which these activists have changed their understanding of transnational collective action over the years helps to explain this book's theoretical concern with the impacts of time, uncertainty, and choice.

In Brazil, Maria Sílvia Portella de Castro and Rafael Freire, in the Unified Workers' Federation, never turned down the numerous requests for interviews and information about their efforts that I have made since they began to build transnational networks around trade agreements two decades ago, first in the Southern Cone and later across the hemisphere. In Mexico, I had the opportunity to meet some of the most important actors in the NAFTA debates in the early 1990s. Bertha Luján, Héctor de la Cueva, and many of the other founders of the Mexican Action Network on Free Trade provided me with unrestricted access both to meetings and to their thoughts, as Mexican civil society actors struggled to find their pathways to transnationality. I had the opportunity to analyze these very different experiences of transnationalism when I was accepted as a Ph.D. student at Johns Hopkins University in 2001. As a U.S.-born but Brazilian-raised scholar who had lived in Mexico, I proposed a broad study on transnational networks that crossed North–South boundaries in the Americas. This book certainly would not have been possible without Margaret Keck's unwavering support and enthusiasm for such an overly ambitious undertaking, support that continued for years after my dissertation was complete.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bulow

Frontmatter

More information

Acknowledgments

In addition to Mimi Keck, I would like to thank most especially the encouragement and intellectual inspiration of Sidney Tarrow, Ann Mische, and Mark Blyth. These wonderful scholars will recognize the many instances that I stand on their shoulders throughout the book. I hope they will forgive me if I have failed to do justice to their influence.

Rebecca Abers, Paula Duarte Lopes, and Ricardo Gutiérrez have been fundamental sources of emotional as well as intellectual support along every stage of this book. I am forever grateful for their friendship and amazed by their brilliance. Bill Smith, Jan Aart Scholte, L. David Brown, Boris Holzer, Daniel Kryder, Diana Tussie, Jonathan Fox, Velia Cecilia Bobes, Graciela Bensusán, Eduardo César Marques, Arnulfo Arteaga, Javier Iñón, Nizar Messari, Miguel Carter, Bilgin Ayata, and Jack Spence helped me along the way with friendly critiques, ideas, and suggestions of key books to be read and contacts to be interviewed. Two anonymous reviewers made important critiques that helped to refine my arguments.

I also want to recognize the generosity of scholars who helped me as I struggled to learn about social network analysis. Ann Mische and Marc Boulay gave me very useful suggestions on the initial drafts of the social network questionnaire. Peter Marsden opened the doors to his great graduate course on social network analysis at Harvard University. At Boston College, Steve Borgatti and his amazing group of graduate students welcomed me to their meetings and showed me that I still have a lot to learn about social network analysis. Special thanks go to Inga Carboni, who made the effort to understand where I wanted to go.

Preliminary versions of the argument in this book have been presented at many venues in North America, South America, and Europe: at the Berlin Roundtables on Transnationality organized in Germany in January 2004, at the Work-in-Progress Seminar sponsored by the Hauser Center for Nonprofit Organizations at Harvard University, at the Center of Social Studies (CES) at the University of Coimbra, at the 2008 Harvard Networks in Political Science Conference, at the Congress that commemorated the fiftieth anniversary of the Latin American Faculty of Social Sciences in Ecuador, and at various meetings of the Latin American Studies Association, the International Studies Association, the American Political Science Association, and the Brazilian International Relations Association. Fellow panelists and audiences made important suggestions and contributed ideas that helped me to further clarify my arguments, and I am grateful to them all. A previous version of the analysis of labor transnationalism that appears here, in Chapters 6 and 9, was published in

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bulow

Frontmatter

More information

Acknowledgments

2009 as an article in the journal Latin American Politics and Society. I am grateful to William C. Smith, the editor of LAPS, for permission to use this previously published material.

Several institutions supported my research through the years. The Fulbright-Hays Doctoral Dissertation Research Award enabled me to spend six months in Brazil, Chile, and Mexico. The Brazilian Ministry of Education, through its agency CAPES, awarded me a scholarship that paid for most of the costs of graduate school, as well as for part of the field research. The Political Science Department at Johns Hopkins University generously covered other costs, and the University of Brasilia gave me a paid leave for the first four years of the Ph.D. program. The Program on Latin American Studies at Johns Hopkins University also helped fund my field research by awarding me a grant to spend one month in Mexico in August 2004, and the Brazilian National Research Council (CNPq) made possible a trip to the United States for further research in 2008.

I am very grateful for the support of my colleagues at the Political Science Institute of the University of Brasilia, most especially of its Director, Marilde Loiola de Menezes. My students at UnB have been a constant source of inspiration. In particular, I wish to thank the undergraduate participants of the Tutorial Educational Program (PET), which I had the pleasure to coordinate while writing this book. Their joyful interest in research and their amazingly sharp questions blurred the lines between those who learn and those who teach. I also thank José Roberto Frutuoso for his assistance in making a first draft of the index and helping to organize the bibliography.

Every person I interviewed for this book contributed in key ways to making this a better work, and I hope they will forgive me for not listing them. In Brazil, Maria Sílvia Portella, Rafael Freire, Gonzalo Berrón, Iara Pietricovsky, Átila Roque, Graciela Rodríguez, Luiz Vicente Facco, and many others went out of their way to help me get the information I needed. In Chile, Etiel Moraga and Coral Pey helped me to understand the Chilean civil society and provided me with all the contacts for the interviews. In Mexico, Maria Atilano and the staff of the Mexican Action Network on Free Trade once more gave me unrestricted access to their documents, analysis, and opinions. In the United States, Stan Gacek, Timi Gerson, and Tom Loudon helped open many doors and gave me wonderful interviews. Other people made me feel at home, most especially Marcela Fernández and her friends and Marcela Ríos and her family in Chile; Velia Cecilia Bobes and her friends and Gabriela Balcazar and

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19156-2 - Building Transnational Networks: Civil Society and the Politics of Trade in the Americas

Marisa von Bulow

Frontmatter

More information

---

Acknowledgments

her family in Mexico; and Márcio Aith, Daniela Araújo, and the little Marina in São Paulo.

I thank my editors at Cambridge University Press, Eric Crahan and Jason Przybylski, for their enthusiastic belief in this undertaking, their efficiency, and their patience. I am also grateful to David Anderson for making this a better book by doing an excellent editing job.

My husband, Carlos, my mother, my sisters, and my friends supported me in my moments of pessimism and understood my frequent absences. Most of all, Carlos patiently endured my seemingly unending need to do more interviews in more countries, at the same time that he nudged me toward finishing this book. His support and love during all these years have helped make this a wonderful journey.

This book was finished as we await the arrival of our first child. In trying to juggle with nausea and deadlines, I follow the pathway taken before by many of my colleagues, who wish, as I do, to face the challenges and rewards of being both a scholar and a mother.

Brasilia, April 2010