Britten’s Unquiet Pasts

Examining the intersections between musical culture and a British project of reconstruction from the 1940s to the early 1960s, this study asks how gestures toward the past negotiated issues of recovery and renewal. In the wake of the Second World War, music became a privileged site for re-enchanting notions of history and community, but musical recourse to the past also raised issues of mourning and loss. How was sound figured as a historical object, and as a locus of memory and magic? Wiebe addresses this question using a wide range of sources, from planning documents to journalism, public ceremonial, and literature. Its central focus, however, is a set of works by Benjamin Britten that engaged both with the distant musical past and with key episodes of postwar reconstruction, including the Festival of Britain, the Coronation of Elizabeth II, and the rebuilding of Coventry Cathedral.

HEATHER WIEBE is Assistant Professor of Music at the University of Virginia. A member of the editorial board of the Opera Quarterly, she has published widely on twentieth-century music, British musical culture, and opera.
Music Since 1900

General Editor Arnold Whittall

This series – formerly Music in the Twentieth Century – offers a wide perspective on music and musical life since the end of the nineteenth century. Books included range from historical and biographical studies concentrating particularly on the context and circumstances in which composers were writing, to analytical and critical studies concerned with the nature of musical language and questions of compositional process. The importance given to context will also be reflected in studies dealing with, for example, the patronage, publishing, and promotion of new music, and in accounts of the musical life of particular countries.

Acknowledgments

It is a pleasure to thank the many people and institutions who have helped with this project over the years. Katherine Bergeron, Richard Taruskin, Roger Parker, and James Vernon read and responded to multiple versions of this text and made crucial interventions in its planning and execution, particularly at the dissertation stage. Many others offered ideas and encouragement, including David Levin, my colleagues at the University of Virginia, and members of the Michigan Society of Fellows. At Berkeley, Martin Deasy, Laura Basini, Greg Bloch, Michael Markham, Dave Paul, Anna Nisnevich, and Mary Ann Smart also provided inspiration and support. Thanks also to Arnold Whittall, as well as staff at Cambridge University Press, for guiding this book through its final stages, and to Steven Kemper and Aurie Hsu for preparing the music examples.

I’m grateful for the grants, fellowships, and research time provided by the University of Virginia and the Michigan Society of Fellows, which allowed me to complete this book, and for a generous subvention from the AMS 75 PAYS Endowment of the American Musicological Society. The dissertation on which it is built was also supported by the American Musicological Society, UC Berkeley, and Berkeley’s Townsend Center for the Humanities, while Berkeley’s Center for British Studies and Pembroke College, Cambridge made possible an invaluable year of research in Britain. My thanks, also, to helpful archivists and librarians at Virginia, Michigan, Berkeley, and Cambridge, and at the British Library, the BBC Written Archives Centre, Coventry Cathedral, the British Film Institute, the archives of King’s College, Cambridge, the V&A Theatre and Performance Archives, the Glyndebourne Archive, and the Royal Opera House Collections, and particularly to Dr. Nicholas Clark and the staff of the Britten–Pears Library, Aldeburgh.

Finally, I’m grateful to Arman Schwartz, who has seen this project through many moves, talks, research trips, and crises, offering endless ideas and encouragement on the way, as well as welcome distractions. And to my parents, Abe and Pearl Wiebe, who provided boundless support.

Material from the Archive Centre at King’s College, Cambridge is reproduced by kind permission of the Provost and Fellows, King’s College, Cambridge. I am also grateful to the Britten–Pears Foundation (brittenpears.org) for permission to print Britten’s unpublished letters and Kurt Hutton’s
