

Contents

Preface	page vii
Introduction	1
1 Health care and community change	13
The neighborhood focus of nineteenth-century medical practice	13
Hospitals of the late-nineteenth-century city	16
Medical care in Brooklyn: the effect of demographic change	23
2 Embattled benefactors: the crisis in hospital financing	36
Hospital financing at the turn of the century	36
The new trustees	50
The question of charging for services	55
3 Social class and hospital care	62
The differentiation of hospital services	64
Advertising the new hospital	71
Hospital patients in Brooklyn	81
4 Conflict in the new hospital	94
Opening the hospital: the question of increased staff privileges for doctors	95
Trustees, physicians, and power	105
Private patients and physicians' payments	108
Organizational battles	111
5 Taking control: political reform and hospital governance	122
The Tammany machine and flat-grant payments for charity	122
Progressive reforms and the charity system	128
The response to Coler's hospital reimbursement system	134
6 Consolidating control over the small dispensary: the doctors, the city, and the state	146
Late-nineteenth-century pressures on the dispensaries	146
The redistribution of city funds and the Dispensary Law of 1899	152
The Brooklyn City Dispensary	157
7 The battle for Morningside Heights: power and politics in the boardroom of New York Hospital	164

vi	Contents
	Property and hospital financing during the late nineteenth century	165
	The battle over Bloomingdale	172
	Land use and social control on Morningside Heights	180
8	Looking backward	187
	Notes on sources	192
	Notes	194
	Select bibliography	228
	Index	231