Thanks

We would like to express our gratitude to all those who have, knowingly or otherwise, helped to shape the ideas that have gone into this book. First of all, we would like to thank our colleagues at the University of Lancaster, both in the Institute for English Language Education and in the Department of Linguistics, and all the students and teachers who have attended our courses there. We are also grateful to the staff and students of the many institutions and projects with whom we have been associated around the world. In particular, we would like to mention the Brazilian National ESP Project; King Mongkut’s Institute of Technology, Thonburi, Thailand; the Sri Lankan Ministry of Higher Education ESP Project; Kuwait University Language Centre; De La Salle University, Manila, Philippines; the University of the Philippines; the French ESP Group; the Technical Education Advisers’ Project, Indonesia; the Ministries of Education in Croatia and Slovenia, Yugoslavia. We would also like to express our gratitude to the British Council, whose support has made many of our contacts with these institutions and projects possible. Finally, we would like to acknowledge our debt to all those ESP practitioners around the world, without whom this book would have no purpose.
