This book provides an authoritative account of Hegel’s social philosophy at a level that presupposes no specialized knowledge of the subject. Hegel’s social theory was designed to reconcile the individual with the modern social world. Michael O. Hardimon explores the concept of reconciliation in detail and discusses Hegel’s views on the relationship between individuality and social membership, and on the family, civil society, and the state.

The book is an important addition to the group of major studies of Hegel published by Cambridge University Press. It will interest a broad swathe of readers in philosophy (both students and specialists), and it can be used in courses on political and social theory.
HEGEL'S SOCIAL PHILOSOPHY:
THE PROJECT OF RECONCILIATION
HEGEL’S SOCIAL PHILOSOPHY
THE PROJECT OF RECONCILIATION

MICHAEL O. HARDIMON
Massachusetts Institute of Technology
TO MARY
CONTENTS

Acknowledgments
page ix

List of abbreviations
xi

Introduction
1

Part I. An approach to Hegel's project

1 The problems of Hegel's project
   I The problem of foreignness
      15
   II The problem of optimism
      22
   III The problem of pessimism
      23
   IV The threat of conservatism, ideology, and the suppression of individuality
      24
   V The worry about misguidedness
      37

2 Geist and the Doppelsatz
   I Geist
      42
   II The Doppelsatz
      52

3 The concept of reconciliation
   I ‘Reconciliation’ and ‘Versöhnung’
      84
   II The attitude of reconciliation
      85
   III Reconciliation and conflict
      87
   IV The philosophical concept of reconciliation
      92
   v

vii
CONTENTS

vii

Alienation
VI Criticism, reform, and revolution

119 122

Part II. The project of reconciliation

4 The anatomy of the project
I The project’s aim, its subject, and its object
II The need for the project
III How the project reconciles
IV How the project is possible
V The role of self-transformation

127 133 135 137 140

5 Individuality and social membership
I Individuality
II Social membership
III The compatibility of individuality and social membership
IV Social membership as making individuality possible
V The social dimension of individuality
VI The individual dimension of social membership

144 146 153 164 167 169 172

6 The family, civil society, and the state
I The family
II Civil society
III The state

174 175 189 205

7 Divorce, war, and poverty
I Divorce
II War
III Poverty

228 228 230 236

Conclusion

251

Selected bibliography

259
Index

267
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

One of the nicest things about completing a book is that you finally get to thank the people who helped you write it. First thanks go to Raymond Geuss and John Rawls, my two mentors. Their criticisms and comments have helped shape this book. Many of the ideas in it derive from Raymond, who taught me how to read and think about Hegel. Josh Cohen, Fred Neuhouser, and Ken Westphal probably read more drafts of more versions of the book than they care to remember. For their extensive and detailed comments I am extremely grateful. I also thank David Brink, Steve Engstrom, Hans Friedrich Fulda, Paul Hoffman, Tim Scanlon, and Gisela Striker for comments on various parts of the manuscript. I am indebted to Bill deVries and Terry Nichols, who read and criticized the complete manuscript of the first version of the book. To Terry I owe additional thanks for the labor of checking the textual references and assisting in the preparation of the final manuscript. Shelly Kagan and Judy Thomson provided a special kind of hard-nosed criticism I found tremendously useful. To George Boolos, John Carriero, Gary Ebbs, Steve Erickson, Victor Gourevitch, Jim Higgenbotham, Tom Kuhn, Marcus Otto, Robert Pippin, Georges Rey, Amélie Rorty, Michael Sandel, and Rob Stainton I express my gratitude for comments and conversations. To Craig Hardimon, my brother, I owe thanks for technical assistance. Without the daily encouragement, constant conversation, and nearly endless editing of my col-
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I would not have completed this book without the support and help of many people. First, I am grateful to my colleagues and friends who saw me through the writing and rewriting of this book. To all of these colleagues, and the many other friends who have supported and encouraged me, I am deeply grateful. Finally, special thanks to Winston Hughes. In the preparation of the manuscript for publication, it was a pleasure to work with Pamela J. Bruton and with Terence Moore and Martin Dinitz of the Cambridge University Press editorial staff.

The first version of this book was completed with a fellowship from the Ford Foundation’s Postdoctoral Fellowship Program. I am grateful for its financial and moral support. I also thank the Department of Linguistics and Philosophy at MIT, which has been extremely generous about granting, and helping to fund, the release from teaching and other responsibilities that made it possible for me to write the book.
ABBREVIATIONS

Standard English translations will be cited along with the original, with English pagination following German pagination, separated by a slash (/). In works cited by section (§), remarks are indicated by an “R” and additions by “Z” (Zusatz). Thus, PR, §261R, means the remark to §261. PR, §261Z, means the addition to §261. A comma used before “R” or “Z” means “and.” Thus, PR, §261, R means §261 and the remark to §261; PR, §261, Z means §261 and the addition to §261; and PR, §261, R, Z means §261 and the remark and addition to §261.

ABBREVIATIONS

ABBREVIATIONS

xiv

section (§) number. Preface cited by paragraph (¶) number. Citations from this translation are listed as “Knox.”

VD “Die Verfassung Deutschlands” (1801–2). In Werke 1. Cited by page number.

ABBREVIATIONS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Abbreviation</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>