In this collection of essays, scholars from the United States, Britain, France, Japan, Australia, and Russia present their latest research on Stalinist repression in the 1930s. The authors draw on materials from recently opened archives in the former Soviet Union and their essays present material never before seen or used in Western studies. The volume supplements works that have focused exclusively on Stalin’s personality by concentrating instead on preconditions, mentalities, economics, and specific groups. By analyzing them, the chapters of the book help to provide a more complete and balanced view of the phenomenon of terror as a whole.
STALINIST TERROR: NEW PERSPECTIVES
STALINIST TERROR
NEW PERSPECTIVES

Edited by
J. ARCH GETTY and ROBERTA T. MANNING
Contents

Acknowledgments vii

Introduction 1

J. ARCH GETTY AND ROBERTA T. MANNING

Part I: Persons and Politics

1 Narkom Ezhov BORIS A. STARKOV 21

2 The Politics of Repression Revisited J. ARCH GETTY 40

Part II: Backgrounds

3 The Second Coming: Class Enemies in the Soviet Countryside, 1927–1935 LYNNE VIOLA 65

4 The Omnipresent Conspiracy: On Soviet Imagery of Politics and Social Relations in the 1930s GÁBOR T. RITTERSPORN 99

5 The Soviet Economic Crisis of 1936–1940 and the Great Purges ROBERTA T. MANNING 116

6 The Stakhanovite Movement: The Background to the Great Terror in the Factories, 1935–1938 ROBERT THURSTON 142
Contents

Part III: Case Studies

7 The Great Terror on the Local Level: Purges in Moscow Factories, 1936–1938  DAVID L. HOFFMAN  163

8 The Great Purges in a Rural District: Belyi Raion Revisited  ROBERTA T. MANNING  168

9 The Red Army and the Great Purges  ROGER R. REESE  198

10 Stalinist Terror in the Donbas: A Note  HIROAKI KUROMIYA  215

Part IV: Impact and Incidence

11 Patterns of Repression Among the Soviet Elite in the Late 1930s: A Biographical Approach  J. ARCH GETTY AND WILLIAM CHASE  225

12 The Impact of the Great Purges on Soviet Elites: A Case Study from Moscow and Leningrad Telephone Directories of the 1930s  SHEILA FITZPATRICK  247

13 Victims of Stalinism: How Many?  ALEC NOVE  261

14 More Light on the Scale of Repression and Excess Mortality in the Soviet Union in the 1930s  STEPHEN G. WHEATCROFT  275

Index  291
Acknowledgments

We are grateful to a number of friends and colleagues who encouraged our efforts in this work. First of all, we are thankful to our contributors for providing us with such fine work and for meeting deadlines with efficiency and general good grace.

In particular, Arch Getty is indebted to Viktor G. Bortnevskii, Nikolai P. Iakovlev, and Andrei K. Sokolov for their logistical help and moral support, and to Oleg V. Naumov for his special assistance. Roberta Manning is grateful to Joseph Berliner, Franklin Holtzman, and Holland Hunter for their help and comments on economic matters. We also offer our thanks to the several Moscow archivists and administrators at the former TsGAOR SSSR, TsGANKh, and the former Central Party Archive who have recently opened up new vistas to us all. Finally, our respective spouses Nancy and Jerry were understanding and patient with bothersome telephone calls, ever more frequent research trips to the former USSR, and occasional eccentric behavior.

Most of this work has been supported at various times by the good offices of the International Research and Exchanges Board (IREX), with funds provided by the American Council of Learned Societies, the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the US Department of State.

Of course, none of these individuals or organizations is responsible for the views expressed in this volume.

Roberta T. Manning’s “The Great Purges in a Rural District: Belyi Raion Revisited” was first published in Russian History/Histoire Russe, Acknowledgements

vol. 16, nos. 2–4, 1989, and appears here in a slightly amended form.

Hiroaki Kuromiya's “Stalinist Terror in the Donbas: A Note” was previously published in Slavic Review, no. 1, 1991, 157–162. It is copyrighted by, and reprinted here in a revised form with the permission of, the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies.