

Contents

Quo uis cumque loco potes hunc finire
libellum:
uersibus explicitumst omne duobus opus.
lemmata si quaeris cur sint adscripta, docebo,
ut, si malueris, lemmata sola legas.
Mart. Ep. 14.2

Preface and acknowledgments	page ix
List of abbreviations	xiii
Introduction	I
The problem with the late Republic	I
Why a “Society of Patrons”? What this book is not – and is – about	7
How a “Society of Patrons”? Methodology and scope	20
I HOW TO WRITE ABOUT WRITING
INTERSECTIONS OF TERMINOLOGY AND SOCIAL CODE:
WHEN, WHAT, AND WHERE	33
1. When? Otium as “time to write”	37
The socioeconomic origins of literary leisure	37
Leisure in the forum	42
Leisure in the text	53
The Imperial Nachleben of otium	63
2. What? Munus as the “gift of duty”	66
The poetics of reciprocal obligation	66
The gift that singularizes	72
From gift-exchange to debt-exchange	93
The Imperial Nachleben of munus	97
3. Where? Libellus : polished and published	101

viii	Contents
II	THE TEXTUALIZATION OF DISPLAY
	INTERSECTIONS OF RHETORIC AND SOCIAL PRACTICE (1):
	FROM DISPLAY TO TEXT	III
4.	The problem with liberal performance	117
	“The gaze cramps my freedom”	117
	From their eyes to their hands: shifting the authority of discourse	123
	Non tam uendibilis : a lexical critique of popularity	131
5.	From public display to textual display	141
	Tirocinium fori and the making of men	141
	“I never left his side”: de Oratore and the erotics of homosocial exchange	144
	From Curia to convivia: naturalizing the textualization of display	155
	Cicero’s paper forum: the written component of oratorical renown	161
6.	The poetics of literary obligation	168
	Obligated to speak: why an orator can’t help himself	168
	Obligated to write: making the offer that can’t be refused	176
	Obligated to two worlds at once: double dedication in Cicero and Catullus 65	191
III	THE MATERIALIZATION OF THE TEXT
	INTERSECTIONS OF RHETORIC AND SOCIAL PRACTICE (2):
	THE DEDICATED TEXT AS “ACTING OBJECT”	207
7.	An object of Catullan affection	216
	More than just texts: fetish as “acting object”	216
	The poem as contract, assault, and payoff: cc. 1, 16, 49, 68b	219
	Hoc poema feci – erotic stand-in and erotic product: c. 50	229
	Howling hendecasyllabi and other material moments: cc. 35, 36, 42, 66	234
8.	Brutus : the dialogic personification of the Republican voice	237
	Cicero, Write something	237
	Why personify?	242
	When speech fell silent (and picked up a pen)	251
	From Greece to Rome; from forum to home	256
	Speaking volumes: the dedicated dialogue as conformatio	265
	Epilogue	269
	Appendix: What “Society of Patrons”? A prosopography of the players	274
	Bibliography	291
	Primary editions consulted	291
	Modern sources	292
	Index locorum	304
	Index rerum et nominum	306