

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-51849-9 - German Orientalism in the Age of Empire: Religion, Race, and Scholarship

Suzanne L. Marchand

Table of Contents

More information

Contents

Acknowledgments	page xiii
Introduction	xvii
1. Orientalism and the Longue Durée	I
Individuals, Institutions, Iconoclasm	6
The Discrete Charm of Chronology	11
Orientalism and the Enlightenment	15
Oriental Civilizations in the Enlightenment	21
The Peculiarities of German Orientalism	28
Herder and Michaelis: The Fate of the Enlightened Old Testament	38
2. Orientalists in a Philhellenic Age	53
Friedrich Schlegel: Renaissance and Revelation	58
Orientalism and Classicism in the Wake of the Creuzer Streit	66
To Be a German Orientalist, 1820–1870	72
The Long Road to Wissenschaftlichkeit	74
Classics-Envy and Its Intellectual Consequences	78
The Glass Half Empty: Orientalism as a Career	84
On Patrons and the Public	95
3. The Lonely Orientalists	102
Biedermeier Bible Criticism or How to Study Jews – and Greeks	105
The (Even Longer) Road to “Scientific” Judaism	113
The Lonely Arabists	118
The Indo-Europeanists	123
Positivism and the Origins of the Aryan-Semitic Divide	124
Fetishizing the Vedas	131
Buddha and the Young Hegelian	134
Poetic Wisdom’s Last Proponent: Friedrich Rückert	138
Carl Ritter: Oriental Geography in Western Libraries	141

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-51849-9 - German Orientalism in the Age of Empire: Religion, Race, and Scholarship

Suzanne L. Marchand

Table of Contents

More information

x

Contents

	Germans Abroad: Neither Conquerors Nor Friends	143
	Ferdinand Von Richthofen: An East Asian Encounter	153
4.	The Second Oriental Renaissance	157
	Orientalism as a Career, 1870–1900	162
	Three Against the Churches: Paul de Lagarde, Theodor Nöldeke, and Julius Wellhausen	167
	Paul de Lagarde: The Orientalism of the Future and the Positivism of the Present	168
	Theodor Nöldeke: Liberal Semitist	174
	Julius Wellhausen: Hebraism and Realism	178
	An Islamic Renaissance?	186
	New Power, New Sources: The Flourishing of Indology in the Era of the Raj	190
	Beyond the Bible? Assyriology and Egyptology in the High Liberal Age	194
	Assyriology's Escape from Infancy	196
	Egyptology for Realists: Adolf Erman	203
	Eduard Meyer: Universal Historian in a Specialized Age	206
5.	The Furor Orientalis	212
	To Be a (Furious) Orientalist	216
	Return to Diffusionism, or the Problem of Universalism in a Philological Culture	227
	Panbabylonism: An Assyriological Revolt and Its Cultural Consequences	236
	Babel und die Bibel Revisited	244
	After the "Affair"	249
6.	Toward an Oriental Christianity	252
	Liberal Theology in Crisis	256
	The Religious-Historical School	259
	The Oriental Origins of New Testament Christianity	267
	Buddha versus Jesus; or, Fin de Siècle Christians and the Problem of Parallels	270
	Persia and Hellenistic Judaism	279
	Orientalizing Saint Paul	284
7.	The Passions and the Races	292
	On Aryans and Semites	295
	Paul Deussen, Schopenhauerian Christian	300
	Popularizing the Aryan Indian: Leopold von Schroeder and Houston Stewart Chamberlain	311

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-51849-9 - German Orientalism in the Age of Empire: Religion, Race, and Scholarship

Suzanne L. Marchand

Table of Contents

More information

Contents	xi
Semitistik in the Post-liberal Period	321
Ignaz Goldziher: Man between Two Laws	323
8. Orientalism in the Age of Imperialism	333
The Culture of German Imperialism	335
German Orientalists and the Actuality of Empire	339
Colonialism and Its Orientalist Institutions	348
Martin Hartmann, Enlightened Arabist	356
Carl Becker: Colonialism and Kulturgeschichte	361
East Asia's Place in the Sun	367
Otto Franke: Orientalism in the Age of "Indirect" Colonialism	377
Erwin Baelz: The Orientalism the Kaiserreich Could Not Use	383
9. Interpreting Oriental Art	387
Oriental Art and the Ethnographic Museum	393
Oriental Carpets and Austrian Art Historians	398
Josef Strzygowski: The Art-Historical Furor Orientalis	403
Exhibiting the Orient in Munich and Berlin	410
The Turfan Expeditions and the Intellectual Consequences of the Central Asian Antiquities Race	416
10. Orientalists and "Others"	427
Orientalists and Others, 1900–1918	429
The Orientalists and the Great War	436
Declaring Jihad	438
Utility, at Last	446
Losing the Eastern Propaganda War: Turks, Armenians, and Jews	454
Richard Wilhelm, German Mandarin	463
Epilogue	474
Orientalism's Indian Summer: Weimar Scholarship and Its Discontents	476
Orientalism and Nazism	487
Why German Orientalists Laid the Foundation for Multicultural Thinking, but Could Not Develop It	495
Select Bibliography	499
Index	513