I would like to thank all copyright holders for permission to reproduce the extracts used in this textbook (wherever necessary). Every possible effort has been made to trace and acknowledge ownership of copyright. I apologize for any omissions and would welcome these being brought to my attention.

I must thank Dr. Kate Brett for inviting me to contribute to the learning of Italian with this textbook. It has been a duty, a privilege, and a pleasure to do so. I thank Dr. Rosemary Williams for her thorough copy-editing of the typescript. Any infelicities which remain are mine alone. I am also extremely grateful to a host of colleagues for giving me crucial input on aspects related to the teaching of Italian. I am particularly thankful to Dr. Gianrenzo P. Clivio of the University of Toronto, Dr. Gianfranco Porcelli of the Catholic University of Milan, Dr. Eddo Rigotti of the University of Lugano, Dr. Annamaria Caimi of the University of Pavia, and Dr. Francesca Trusso of the University of Rome “La Sapienza.” Finally, I am deeply indebted to the thousands of students I have taught over three decades. They have always been, and continue to be, a source of inspiration and enthusiasm.
