Remapping Global Politics

This book seeks to redraw our mental maps of global politics and to explain the shifting and accelerating forces that are shaping those maps. The authors build on the concept of “postinternationalism,” focusing primarily on “political space” and “political identity” which, they argue, are the new frontiers of global political theory. They suggest that the state is losing capacity, legitimacy, and authority to remain the primary actor in world affairs and is giving way to a more complex postinternational universe characterized by diverse and overlapping polities. This book is the result of the authors’ long-standing joint research into the nature and dynamics of global politics, a collaboration that has spanned over three decades. It makes an important contribution to the literatures on globalization and the future of international relations theory.

Yale H. Ferguson is Professor of Political Science and Co-Director of the Center for Global Change and Governance, Rutgers University, Newark, and Honorary Professor, University of Salzburg.

CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS: 97

Editorial Board

Steve Smith (Managing Editor)
Thomas Biersteker  Phil Cerny  Michael Cox
A. J. R. Groom  Richard Higgott  Kimberley Hutchings
Caroline Kennedy-Pipe  Steve Lamy  Michael Mastanduno
Louis Pauly  Ngaire Woods

Cambridge Studies in International Relations is a joint initiative of Cambridge University Press and the British International Studies Association (BISA). The series will include a wide range of material, from undergraduate textbooks and surveys to research-based monographs and collaborative volumes. The aim of the series is to publish the best new scholarship in International Studies from Europe, North America and the rest of the world.
CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

97 Yale H. Ferguson and Richard W. Mansbach
Remapping global politics
History’s revenge and future shock

96 Christian Reus-Smit (ed.)
The politics of international law

95 Barry Buzan
From international to world society?
English school theory and the social structure of globalisation

94 K. J. Holsti
Taming the sovereigns
Institutional change in international politics

93 Bruce Cronin
Institutions for the common good
International protection regimes in international society

92 Paul Keal
European conquest and the rights of indigenous peoples
The moral backwardness of international society

91 Barry Buzan and Ole Wæver
Regions and powers
The structure of international security

90 A. Claire Cutler
Private power and global authority
Transnational merchant law in the global political economy

89 Patrick M. Morgan
Deterrence now

88 Susan Sell
Private power, public law
The globalization of intellectual property rights

87 Nina Tannenwald
The nuclear taboo
The United States and the non-use of nuclear weapons since 1945

86 Linda Weiss (ed.)
States in the global economy
Bringing domestic institutions back in

(List continues at the end of book)
Remapping Global Politics
History’s Revenge and Future Shock

Yale H. Ferguson
and
Richard W. Mansbach
To
Rhoda and Kitty
Contents

Preface xi
Acknowledgments xiii
1 Postinternational politics 1
2 Theory and method 35
3 Political space and time 67
4 States and other polities 107
5 Identities in a postinternational world 143
6 A postinternational world economy 181
7 War in a postinternational world 227
8 Technology and change 273
9 The future 312

Index 343
Preface

The authors have been pursuing a joint research collaboration and agenda for over three decades. Our first joint book, The Web of World Politics (1976) sought to analyze what we perceived to be the growing significance and proliferation of nonstate actors in the global system. Our second, The Elusive Quest (1988) focused on the evolution and normative foundation of theory and method in the field of international relations. Next, The State, Conceptual Chaos, and the Future of International Relations Theory (1989) pointed up the diversity of interpretations of “the state” as a concept that masked different views of its character and significance. In Politics (1996) we turned to historical case studies of six pre-Westphalian systems and elaborated what we still believe is a timeless framework for understanding authorities, identities, and change. We put the Westphalian State in historical perspective, noted the contemporary erosion of state capacity, and suggested that the future would probably be more like the past of multiple authorities than the era when the European nation-state model was preeminent. The Elusive Quest Continues (2003) updated trends in theory and method in the preceding fifteen years.

Remapping Global Politics now compares and contrasts two political worlds, one international and the other postinternational. This book seeks to do exactly what the title promises – redraw our mental maps of global politics and explain the forces shaping change. Recognition of the changing nature of political space and time takes us well beyond the two-dimensional cartographic representations that were deemed sufficient for centuries. Among the most important of the outcomes is to confirm the always important but increasingly salient role of identity in explaining behavior. There are also separate chapters on the global economy, war, and technology.
This book owes much to towering theorists ranging from Karl Deutsch, Ernst Haas, and Hedley Bull to Susan Strange and James N. Rosenau, who early on glimpsed a world beyond an unchanging state system. There is insufficient space to name them all, but their contributions to our field have been enormous. The field keeps reinventing the wheel by failing to recognize that “new theory” is too often recycled “old theory,” but in every period there have been pioneers or “jailbreakers” as Rosenau likes to put it – and he himself, happily and most decidedly, still is.

Thankfully, our marriages have lasted even longer than our research collaboration – hence the heartfelt dedication of this book to our spouses, Rhoda Mansbach and Kitty Ferguson, for their constant love and support.
Acknowledgments

Acknowledgments