This is a succinct survey of the numerous contributions to the history of the American west. In the past twenty-five years historians have created a ‘New Western History’, which has aimed to rewrite the ‘Old Western History’ built around the famous Turner thesis on the significance of the American Frontier. Focusing on five main themes, this study examines and discusses the dynamics and progress of recent scholarship. Consideration is given to issues of land use, the environment, race, ethnicity, gender, business and the development of communities. Synthesising prolific research the book offers a clear and up-to-date review for all students of American history. A full bibliography is provided for more extended study.

MARGARET WALSH is Professor of American Economic and Social History in the School of American and Canadian Studies at the University of Nottingham. She is author and editor of several books and many articles on economic and social history, most recently, Making Connections: The Long Distance Bus Industry in the USA (2000).
New Studies in Economic and Social History

Edited for the Economic History Society by Maurice Kirby
Lancaster University

This series, specially commissioned by the Economic History Society, provides a guide to the current interpretations of the key themes of economic and social history in which advances have recently been made or in which there has been significant debate.

In recent times economic and social history has been one of the most flourishing areas of historical study. This has mirrored the increasing relevance of the economic and social sciences both in a student’s choice of career and in forming a society at large more aware of the importance of these issues in their everyday lives. Moreover, specialist interests in business, agricultural and welfare history, for example, have themselves burgeoned and there has been an increased interest in the economic development of the wider world. Stimulating as these scholarly developments have been for the specialist, the rapid advance of the subject and the quantity of new publications make it difficult for the reader to gain an overview of particular topics, let alone the whole field.

New Studies in Economic and Social History is intended for students and their teachers. It is designed to introduce them to fresh topics and to enable them to keep abreast of recent writing and debates. All the books in the series are written by a recognised authority in the subject, and the arguments and issues are set out in a critical but unpartisan fashion. The aim of the series is to survey the current state of scholarship, rather than to provide a set of pre-packaged conclusions.

The series has been edited since its inception in 1986 by Professors M. W. Flinn, T. C. Smount, L. A. Clarkson and Michael Sanderson, and is currently edited by Professor Maurice Kirby. From 1968 it was published by Macmillan as Studies in Economic History, and after 1974 as Studies in Economic and Social History. From 1995 New Studies in Economic and Social History is being published on behalf of the Economic History Society by Cambridge University Press. This new series includes some of the titles previously published by Macmillan as well as new titles, and reflects the ongoing development throughout the world of this rich seam of history.

For a full list of titles in print, please see the end of the book.
The American West. Visions and Revisions

Margaret Walsh
Contents

List of maps viii
List of tables ix
Acknowledgements x

1  The frontier and the west: realities, myths and the historians 1
2  Land and landscapes: occupation and ownership 19
3  Peoples and migrations 35
4  Making a living: early settlements and farming 72
5  Making a living: non-farming occupations 93
6  Western communities 114
   Epilogue 136

References 138
Index 155
Maps

2:1 Continental expansion of the United States  26
3:1 Native peoples of North America  38
3:2 Distribution of population, 1790  48
3:3 Distribution of population east of the 100th meridian, 1840  49
3:4 Distribution of population (excluding Indians not taxed), 1890  50
Tables

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2:1</td>
<td>Acquisition of the public domain</td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2:2</td>
<td>Disposition of lands in the public domain</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3:1</td>
<td>Population growth in the west, 1790–1920</td>
<td>46</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3:2</td>
<td>Regional population growth in the west, 1790–1920</td>
<td>47</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3:3</td>
<td>Position of centre of population in the United States, 1790–1890</td>
<td>51</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Acknowledgements

It is impossible for a British historian to undertake research and writing on American history without financial assistance. I am very grateful to the British Academy who awarded me their fellowship to the Huntington Library in 1996. The Huntington provides the resources and companionship of what ranks as an ‘El Dorado’ to a scholar of American Western History. I am also very grateful to the Institute for Advanced Study at Indiana University which welcomed me as a Visiting Scholar in the autumn of 2002 and thereby facilitated my use of Western materials at the university’s substantial holdings. My own School of American and Canadian Studies and the University of Nottingham financially supported this visit to Bloomington.

I also wish to acknowledge the ideas generated and the audiences provided by both undergraduate students and MA students at the University of Nottingham. Chris Wrigley read and wisely commented on the earlier versions of this manuscript and provided support and encouragement throughout its gestation. I alone am responsible for any errors in the text.