Workers and Peasants in the Modern Middle East

The working people, who constitute the majority in any society, can be and deserve to be subjects of history. Joel Beinin’s state-of-the-art survey of subaltern history in the Middle East demonstrates lucidly and compellingly how their lives, experiences, and culture can inform our historical understanding. Beginning in the middle of the eighteenth century, the book charts the history of peasants, urban artisans, and modern working classes across the lands of the Ottoman Empire and its Muslim-majority successor-states, including the Balkans, Turkey, the Arab Middle East, and North Africa. Inspired by the approach of the Indian Subaltern Studies school, the book is the first to present a synthetic critical assessment of the scholarly work on the social history of this region for the last twenty years. It offers new insights into the political, economic, and social life of ordinary men and women and their apprehension of their own experiences. Students will find it rich in narrative detail, and accessible and authoritative in presentation.

JOEL BEININ is Professor of Middle East History at Stanford University. His publications include The Dispersion of Egyptian Jewry: Culture, Politics, and the Formation of a Modern Diaspora (1998) and Was the Red Flag Flying There? Marxist Politics and the Arab–Israeli Conflict in Egypt and Israel, 1948–65 (1990).
The Contemporary Middle East 2

Series editor: Eugene L. Rogan

Books published in The Contemporary Middle East series address the major political, economic and social debates facing the region today. Each title comprises a survey of the available literature against the background of the author’s own critical interpretation which is designed to challenge and encourage independent analysis. While the focus of the series is the Middle East and North Africa, books are presented as aspects of a rounded treatment, which cuts across disciplinary and geographic boundaries. They are intended to initiate debate in the classroom, and to foster understanding amongst professionals and policy makers.

Acknowledgments

This book synthesizes and develops much of what I have offered in my graduate colloquium on Economic and Social History of the Modern Middle East for over a decade. The students I have had the privilege of teaching in that class occupy a very special place in my heart. I have enjoyed immensely learning from them and sharing their companionship and sense of purpose.

Eugene Rogan and Marigold Acland first proposed to me that I write this book and accompanied it through its completion. I am most grateful that they did. The process of writing has forced me to think more broadly and clarified many issues in my own mind.

In addition to them, Rob Blecher, Elliot Colla, Kenneth Cuno, Zachary Lockman, Karen Pfeifer, Marsha Pripstein Posusney, Nancy Reynolds, and Shira Robinson read parts or all of the text at various stages in its development. They offered many valuable comments and saved me from some careless errors. Had I been able to implement all their suggestions, this would undoubtedly have been a better book.

Papers that evolved into chapter 4 were delivered in the spring of 1999 at the International Workshop on Modernity in the Middle East: History and Discourse at Ben-Gurion University of the Negev; the Seminar on Empires and Cultures Annual Workshop at Stanford University; and the Conference on Nation and Cultural Perceptions of Identity at UCLA. Early versions of chapter 6 were presented at the 1998 annual meeting of the Middle East Studies Association and the Conference on New Approaches to the Study of Ottoman and Arab Societies at Boğaziçi University in 1999. An early version of small sections of chapters 5 and 6 was published as “The Working Class and Peasantry in the Middle East: From Economic Nationalism to Neoliberalism,” Middle East Report no. 210 (Spring 1999):18–22.

A brief research trip to the Middle East in 1997 was supported by a Hewlett Faculty Research Grant. Much of the text was written during 1999–2000 while I was a fellow at the Stanford Humanities Center – an extraordinary institution for which I wish much continued good fortune and success.

This is the first book I have written without being in close contact with its subjects. Nonetheless, some of them have always been in my mind and heart. I can never repay the debt I owe to Fathi Kamil, Hasan ‘Abd al-Rahman, Muhammad ‘Ali ‘Amir, Muhammad Jad, Muhammad Mutawalli al-Sha‘rawi, Atiyya al-Sirafi, and Taha Sa‘d ‘Uthman – Egyptian workers whose insights and memories of their own lives launched me on my academic career and who affirmed through their struggles and their kindness to me the values we share.

As always, Miriam has supported me with her care and love.
