

Contents

List of Contributors	page vii
Part I: Introducing Problem Representation
1 Introduction Donald A. Sylvan	3
2 On the Representation of Problems: An Information-Processing Approach to Foreign Policy Decision Making James F. Voss	8
Part II: Overarching Conceptual Issues
3 The Interpretation of Foreign Policy Events: A Cognitive Process Theory Charles S. Taber	29
4 Problem Identification in Sequential Policy Decision Making: The Re-representation of Problems Robert S. Billings and Charles F. Hermann	53
5 Collective Interpretations: How Problem Representations Aggregate in Foreign Policy Groups Ryan Beasley	80
6 Image Change and Problem Representation after the Cold War Martha Cottam and Dorcas E. McCoy	116
v

vi	Contents
	Part III: Empirical Analysis
7	Problem Representations and Political Expertise: Evidence from “Think Aloud” Protocols of South African Elite Helen E. Purkitt	147
8	Reasoning and Problem Representation in Foreign Policy: Groups, Individuals, and Stories Donald A. Sylvan and Deborah M. Haddad	187
9	Representing Problem Representation Michael D. Young	213
10	A Problem-Solving Perspective on Decision-Making Processes and Political Strategies in Committees: The Case of Controversial Supreme Court Justice Nomination Hearings Katherine M. Gannon	249
11	When Gender Goes to Combat: The Impact of Representations in Collective Decision Making Silvana Rubino-Hallman	261
12	Representations of the Gulf Crisis as Derived from the U.S. Senate Debate James F. Voss, Jennifer Wiley, Joel Kennet, Tonya E. Schooler, and Laurie Ney Silfies	279
13	Configuring Issue Areas: Belgian and Dutch Representations of the Role of Foreign Assistance in Foreign Policy Marijke Breuning	303
	Part IV: Conclusion
14	Reflecting on the Study of Problem Representation: How Are We Studying It, and What Are We Learning? Donald A. Sylvan	333
	Index	343