ELIZABETHAN WOMEN AND THE POETRY OF COURTSHIP

This book offers an original study of lyric form and social custom in the Elizabethan age. Ilona Bell explores the tendency of Elizabethan love poems not only to represent an amorous thought, but to conduct the courtship itself. Where recent studies have focused on courtiership, patronage and preferment at court, her focus is on love poetry, amorous courtship, and relations between Elizabethan men and women. The book examines the ways in which the tropes and rhetoric of love poetry were used to court Elizabethan women (not only at court and in the great houses, but in society at large) and how the women responded to being wooed, in prose, poetry and speech. Bringing together canonical male poets and recently discovered women writers, Ilona Bell investigates a range of texts addressed to, written by, read, heard or transformed by Elizabethan women, and charts the beginnings of an early modern female lyric tradition.

Ilona Bell is Professor of English Literature at Williams College in Massachusetts. She has held a number of research fellowships, and published essays and reviews on Renaissance literature in a wide range of periodicals.
A Marriage Feast at Bermondsey by Joris Hoefnagel, 1570.
ELIZABETHAN WOMEN AND THE POETRY OF COURTSHIP

ILONA BELL
To Bob –

Let us love nobly, and live, and add again
Years and years unto years, till we attain
To write threescore.

John Donne, “The Anniversarie”
But if – fie of such a but! – you be born so near the dull-making cataract of Nilus, that you cannot hear the planet-like music of poetry; if you have so earth-creeping a mind that it cannot lift itself up to look to the sky of poetry . . . thus much curse I must send you in behalf of all poets: that while you live you live in love, and never get favour, for lacking skill of a sonnet. Sidney, Defence of Poesy
Contents

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>List of illustrations</th>
<th>x</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Acknowledgments</td>
<td>xii</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>List of abbreviations</td>
<td>xiv</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

1. An introduction to Elizabethan courtship   1
2. An Elizabethan poetics of courtship  15
3. The practice of Elizabethan courtship  33
4. The lyric dialogue of Elizabethan courtship  53
5. Anne Vavasour and Henry Lee  75
6. A female lyric tradition  100
7. Daniel’s lyric dialogue of courtship  126
8. Spenser’s Amoretti  152
9. Epilogue  185

Notes  190
Works cited  230
Index  258
Illustrations

4 Unknown Lady, attributed to Sir William Segar, c. 1595. Current location unknown. Photograph courtesy of the Courtauld Institute of Art.

5 Loues ioy is reuyed by letters. Reproduced from Otto Van Veen, Amorvm Emblemata. Courtesy of Chapin Library, Williams College.

8 Henry Lee’s armor [with detail of the initials A. V.] by kind permission of the Worshipful Company of Armourers & Brasiers of London. Photograph by Peter Holland, London.
List of illustrations

Acknowledgments

I am indebted to the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Francis C. Oakley Center for the Humanities and Social Sciences, the Williams College Faculty Research Fund, the Mary Ingraham Bunting Institute, and D. L. Smith for their generous support. Numerous colleagues and friends, Lynda Bundtzen, Teresa Cader, Lawrence Graver, Suzanne Graver, John Kleiner, Carole Levin, Carol Ockman, Christopher Pye, Lawrence Raab, John Reichert, Shawn Rosenheim, Stephen Tifft, and Anita Sokolsky, have read various chapters and offered invaluable advice.

My debts to other scholars of Renaissance poetry, Elizabethan women, and early modern England – are only barely indicated by the footnotes. I am especially thankful to Anne Davidson Ferry for teaching me to respect and love better the elegant intricacies of Renaissance poetry, and to Barbara Lewalski for asking me questions about Elizabethan women that I had no idea how to answer. Heather Dubrow not only taught me a great deal by her own writing on Renaissance poetry but also helped clarify mine. Clark Hulse’s careful reading of the entire manuscript and astute suggestions were an unexpected boon. Darra Goldstein ran many miles with me and this book, and offered wise counsel and unflagging support all the way. My daughters, Kaitlin Jessica Bell and Amanda Dana Bell, provided a continuing source of inspiration, and Amanda supplied the title. I hope their view of the project (“I hate Mom’s book!”) is not widespread. Above all, I am grateful to Robert Bell for the rich and witty conversations which helped me appreciate the poetry and playfulness of courtship, and for commenting so sensibly on the seemingly endless drafts of this manuscript.

I want to thank the librarians at Sawyer Library and Chapin Library who could not have been more unstinting with their help, and Josie Dixon, my editor, whose continuing support of this project is much
Acknowledgments

I appreciated. My students at Smith College, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Williams College shared my education in Renaissance women, and my conversations with them remain a vital part of my own dialogues with Renaissance love poems. Brian Boucher, Elizabeth Geren, Christopher Kavanaugh, Anne Mallory, Tanya Stanciu, Nancy Vorsanger, and Margaret Wildrick, provided helpful editorial and research assistance. Anne Just edited and scrupulously checked an earlier draft of the manuscript. Any remaining blunders, oversimplifications, or over-complications are entirely my own doing.

This project began as an essay on the role of the lady in Donne’s Songs and Sonnets, and a fascination with Elizabeth I’s love language. Trying to understand the lives not only of Anne More Donne and Elizabeth Tudor but of all Elizabethan women proved so arduous and extensive an undertaking that Donne’s poetry and Elizabeth’s politics were relegated to the margins. And so I conclude this book haunted by the feeling that “Thou has not done.”
Abbreviations

AS Astrophil and Stella

SS
Shakespeare’s Sonnets
The Riverside Shakespeare, G. Blakemore Evans et al. (eds.) (Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1974)

Am
Amoretti

Rom.
Romeo and Juliet
The Riverside Shakespeare, G. Blakemore Evans et al. (eds.) (Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1974)

AYL
As You Like It
The Riverside Shakespeare, G. Blakemore Evans et al. (eds.) (Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1974)

TT
The Temple

RS
Rime Sparse

DP
Sidney’s Defence of Poesie
From The Countesse Pembroke’s Arcadia (London, 1598)

AEP
The Arte of English Poesie

PS
Poems and Sonnets
Sidney, Sir Philip, ‘Poems and Sonnets of Sundrie Other Noble men and Gentlemen.’ Syr P. S. his Astrophel and Stella. To the end of wh. are added Sundry other rare sonnets of divers gentlemen. J3v–L2v.