

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-63490-8 - Medical Harm: Historical, Conceptual, and Ethical Dimensions of Iatrogenic Illness

Virginia A. Sharpe and Alan I. Faden

Table of Contents

More information

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
Part I
1 Divided loyalties: harm to the profession vs. harm to the patient	21
2 Medical epistemology, medical authority and shifting interpretations of beneficence and nonmaleficence	36
3 Medical harms and patients' rights: the democratization of medical morality	61
Part II
4 The moral basis of medicine: why 'do no harm'?	81
5 Due care as a specification of the duty to 'do no harm'	100
6 Conceptual and ethical dimensions of medical harm	115
Part III
7 From hospitalism to nosocomial infection control	153
8 Adverse effects of drug treatment	175
9 Unnecessary surgery	194
10 The concept of appropriateness in patient care	213
11 Recommendations for limiting iatrogenic harm	230
Appendix	241
Bibliography	248
Index	271