

Cambridge University Press

0521669944 - Exploring Grammar in Writing: Upper-Intermediate and Advanced

Rebecca Hughes

Frontmatter

More information

Exploring Grammar in Writing

upper-intermediate and advanced

with answers

Rebecca Hughes

Cambridge University Press

0521669944 - Exploring Grammar in Writing: Upper-Intermediate and Advanced

Rebecca Hughes

Frontmatter

More information

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge, New York, Melbourne, Madrid, Cape Town, Singapore, São Paulo

Cambridge University Press

The Edinburgh Building, Cambridge CB2 2RU, UK

www.cambridge.org

Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9780521669948

© Cambridge University Press 2005

This book is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2005

Printed in the United Kingdom by Polestar Wheatons Ltd., Exeter

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

ISBN-13 978-0-521-66994-9

ISBN-10 0-521-66994-4

Contents

Acknowledgements	v
Introduction	vi
Part 1 Writing for different readers
1 Everyday notes	3
Shortening the message by using ellipsis
Common abbreviations and when to use them
2 Greetings cards	9
Conventional expressions used for different occasions
Varying the warmth and formality of the message
3 Formal letters and e-mails	15
Expressing requests for action and making suggestions
Combining conditionals and modals to make requests
4 Policies and agreements	21
Modals and semi-modals of obligation
Formal versus informal language choices
Part 2 Building noun phrases
5 Business letters	29
Patterns of noun phrases
Writing opening statements
6 Hobby books	35
Using articles with countable and uncountable nouns
Degree adverbs
7 Informal letters and e-mails	41
Using articles to show shared knowledge
Handling vague language
8 Catalogues	47
Building noun phrases using for and with
Adjectives which take prepositions
9 Technical manuals	53
Nouns pre-modified by other nouns
Prepositions used to express precise actions

Part 3 Adding more information to the sentence

10 Encyclopaedias	61
Defining and non-defining relative clauses Starting a relative clause with a preposition
11 Blurbs	67
Adding information at the start of a clause Variations in noun pre-modification
12 Holiday brochures	73
Expanding the sentence using co-ordination Handling adjective choices
13 Travel guides	79
Adding information to the noun by apposition Varying the style by moving appositional phrases
14 Direct mail	85
Adding comparative and superlative structures to the sentence Adjectives that do not normally take comparative or superlative forms

Part 4 Sequencing and focusing

15 Everyday instruction booklets	93
Non-finite clauses: -ing and to ... Prepositions introducing -ing clauses
16 Newspaper stories	99
Handling and combining adverbs of time and place Adverb phrases starting with prepositions
17 Packaging	105
Various styles of instructions Reduced imperatives
18 Advertisements	111
Using adverbs for emphasis Using only for focus
19 Essays and reports	117
Comparing approaches Making your own point and supporting it with references
20 Feature articles	123
Interesting the reader and changing the focus using it Adjectives and verbs commonly used in it clauses
Answer key	129
Glossary	160
Index	165

Acknowledgements

I owe a debt of gratitude to many members of the Cambridge University Press ELT Division for their patience, good humour and professionalism in what became an extended writing process for this title. I would like to thank Alison Sharpe in particular for her original faith in the project and continued support. Her sensitive, insightful and sometimes necessarily stern approach helped me considerably through some of the early iterations of the book. Jamie Smith provided an excellent new pair of eyes on the close to final versions, always providing nice (in the older sense of the word) judgements between the abstract and the practical. I owe Fiona Davis a particular debt of gratitude for her meticulous and sympathetic approach to the editing. Despite time pressures the editorial team at the Press, and Fiona most of all, have always found time to tease out a solution to a knotty problem that manages to remain in harmony with my intentions for the book. Thanks to Olly, too, for sleeping when he should (on the whole!) and providing us with a cheering topic of conversation when it all got a bit much.

Comments from students, and conversations with staff, at the Centre for English Language Education (CELE), University of Nottingham about trying to explain grammar in context have, as ever, been invaluable. I hope they will find this user-friendly, and worth the wait.

The unusually high number of ephemeral and everyday texts used in this book has meant that the process of clearing permissions has been complex and demanding. Again, particular thanks to Jamie, Fiona, Marie Allan and Suzanne Williams who I realise must have been tearing their hair out at various points when asked to clear another small ad for a watering can, or a web page that had seemingly vanished.

There are many others who have helped to create this book in the form you see and should be thanked, although I have not had contact with them individually. The design team in particular have managed to express the actuality of some of these texts and give the sense of language being used in a living context.

Thanks to my husband, Kieron O'Hara, for insisting that I stop working at various points. All these, and many others, should be thanked for their support, insights, corrections and comments. Any remaining shortcomings should lie at my door.

Cambridge University Press

0521669944 - Exploring Grammar in Writing: Upper-Intermediate and Advanced

Rebecca Hughes

Frontmatter

More information

The author and publishers are grateful to the following for permission to reproduce copyright material. It has not always been possible to identify the source of material used or to contact the copyright holders and in such cases the publishers would welcome information from the copyright owners.

The instructor college (www.theinstructorcollege.co.uk) for the text on p.34 from their advertisement; Frances Bissell for the recipe on p.36 from The Times Book of Vegetarian Cookery by Frances Bissell © Frances Bissell 1994; Extract from Delia's Complete Cookery Course by Delia Smith on p.37 reproduced with the permission of BBC Worldwide Limited. Copyright © Delia Smith 1978; Tesoro Electronics Inc for the extract on p.54 from the Bandido II µMax manual; Mamas and Papas Ltd for text and diagrams on p.57 taken from the Primo Viaggio Infant Carrier Instructions; Warner Books for the text on p.67 from the cover of Plum Island by Nelson DeMille © Time Warner 1998; extract on p.79, reproduced with permission from Britain 3, © 1999 Lonely Planet Publications; Sony Ericsson for the extract on p.98 from the T630 mobile phone manual; The Boots Company PLC for the text on p.109 taken from the instructions on a packet of Boots paracetamol caplets.

Illustrations by Mark Duffin pp 47

Commissioned photography by MM Studios pp 48, 51br, 95r, 107

Photographic Acknowledgements

(top = t, bottom = b, left = l, right = r, centre = c)

(credit to come from CUP for 2 photos on page 54)

Alamy pp 73tl (Neil Setchfield), 73br (Coston Stock), 77 (Travel-Shots), 79 (David Copeman), 82 (Dallas and John Heaton/ SCPhotos), 102 (Acestock Limited), 124b (Mediacolor's); Corbis pp 71 (© Close Murray), 73tr (Bob Krist), 73bl (Charles Lenars), 73bc (Owen Franken), 83 (Charles Lenars), 84b (Chris Hellier), 124t (Ludovic Maisant); Geoff Holdsworth p113; Getty Images pp 61 (Getty Images), 76 (Walter Hodges), 85b (Louis B Wallach Inc), 90 (Ken Chernus), 95l (Archive Holdings Inc), 104 (Bob Torrez), 114 (Kerrick James Photog), 124c (Lester Lefkowitz); Lonely Planet Images p 84t (John Borthwick); Photolibary.com pp 37 (Jonelle Weaver), 51cl (Picture Plain), 88 (MarkBarrett), 115 (Brian Hagiwara); PRshots/Accessorize p 51t; Punchstock pp 65 (Comstock Images), 84c (Image100), 85t (PhotoDisc Green/Hoby Finn), 85cr (Thinkstock/Ron Chapple); Science Photo Library p 123 (TEK Image)

Photographs supplied by Pictureresearch.co.uk

Typeface Utopia 9.5/13pt System QuarkXPress® [KAMAE]

Introduction

Philosophy

Why not what

This book aims to provide students with insights about the interplay of language, texts and audience. Grammar is presented as a tool for living communication between writers and readers. Grammar in writing is about communicating ideas appropriately to different audiences and understanding their needs: it is living grammar. Using largely real examples from a wide range of contexts, the book challenges the learner to ask why the writer chose a structure, rather than simply analyse what the writer used.

Factors influencing grammar and style

Rather than thinking of written language in the abstract, the book analyses the impact of the following types of factor on grammar and style:

- whether something is written to be kept as a record or written to be thrown away (Unit 1: Everyday notes or Unit 17: Packaging versus Unit 4: Policies and agreements or Unit 10: Encyclopaedias)
- whether the writer is writing for an anonymous, global readership or for a close personal friend (Unit 16: Newspaper stories or Unit 18: Advertisements versus Unit 2: Greetings cards or Unit 7: Informal letters and e-mails)
- whether the text is written primarily to inform or instruct or for a very different function (Unit 6: Hobby Books or Unit 9: Technical Manuals versus Unit 8: Catalogues or Unit 14: Direct Mail)

In each unit these contextual and functional factors are related to one or two typical language features which the texts tend to show. For instance, because newspaper stories are interested in the where, when, who, what and why of an event, they will usually be rich in adverb phrases locating and explaining circumstances. These stories are limited in terms of space, and so they will also contain devices to shorten the message, for example specific prepositional phrases used as a shorthand for longer clauses. Crucially, this book aims to link easily grasped real-world writing constraints and influencing factors with an explanation of the grammar featured in these same contexts.

Approach

An inductive, awareness-raising approach informs the book. Clear summaries reinforce key points, but the tasks themselves first ask the student to think about why a structure or word choice has been made in that particular context. This is particularly clear in the Think about why tasks, but the majority of the material is written with this questioning approach in mind.

The book is intended to have features which appeal to both analytical and more communication focused learners. Standard grammatical terms are used as far as possible, and any terms which may be unfamiliar or need revision are in the glossary. Many of the tasks ask the student to locate and analyse a particular grammatical structure in context. However, the tasks are also intended to move beyond these sentence level insights, to encourage debate over why one form has been used over another.

Level

The tasks are designed to be carried out by students at upper-intermediate or advanced levels. It is assumed that the student has a productive writing skill around a strong 5.0 in IELTS and a reading ability slightly above this. However, the combination of work on accuracy and on style and register means that this is also excellent supplementary material for higher level students, including those on CAE or CPE courses.

The data

This book is based on a broad cross-section of authentic material written in English. The data for the book are taken from a wide variety of texts, and are in many cases from the Cambridge International Corpus.

New technologies are challenging our conception of texts as the process of writing takes place more and more within the context of electronic media. In addition to more familiar types of writing, such as letters and published texts, this book examines the influence of the medium of production on some of the newer genres of writing that are emerging (for example, e-mail messages or internet pages).

The book incorporates some of the more ephemeral and marginal types of writing which are produced in English, such as notes and cards. These texts are of particular interest for an advanced learner of English, since they are genres which can be very challenging to produce but which are in everyday use.

The design of the units

The material is designed for both class and self-study use. Each unit follows the same pattern and deals with one broad category of texts. Section A provides an example of the text type along with an opening task which asks the student to relate a main idea from the unit to their own life experience. This can be used in class for a warm-up phase, or to orient the self-study user. The opening section ends with a Think about why task which prompts the student to think about a key feature of the text type and relate this to a language point.

Section B provides the main language points of the unit, presented in the context of the text types in question. The tasks here are intended to be awareness-raising and provoke some discussion. Summary boxes draw together the language points raised. Students are given the opportunity to practise items in section C. In some cases students may need to return to section B and review the summaries in the light of the more productive tasks. In section D there are follow-up tasks which are designed as mini language awareness projects on the topics being discussed or for more extended writing practice.

The tasks in sections A, B and C have clear answers which are provided in the key, but the successful use of the book does not only lie in getting through the material efficiently and checking your answers are right. In teaching from these materials, it is the discussion generated by prompts for thinking about why which provides the most meaningful language learning experiences.