So you want to be a journalist?

So you want to be a journalist? is a practical hands-on guide to the world of journalism, particularly for the beginner. It contains step-by-step instructions on writing for the news media and practical advice and suggestions on all facets of reporting. It covers the basic skills in:

- research and investigation
- interviewing
- writing news and feature material
- basic subediting and layout and design
- the essentials of grammar, spelling and punctuation
- relevant laws
- understanding and calculating data
- print, radio, television and online reporting
- ethical and professional behaviour.

The book demonstrates its points with many examples of fine writing and reporting in the very best traditions of journalism by some of the hundreds of students who have worked with the author over many years. It also shows what excellent work student reporters can produce, despite not having the resources of large news organisations behind them. It not only reveals how to do it, but also shows what can be achieved. So you want to be a journalist? is the book no student or novice journalist can afford to be without.

Bruce Grundy is Adjunct Professor in the School of Journalism and Communication at the University of Queensland. He has been a journalist for over 40 years, and has taught practical and theory courses in television, radio and print journalism since 1979.

Acknowledgments

For more than 25 years I have had the chance to work with a host of talented young and not-so-young people who made my life at the University of Queensland one to be envied. To teach them whatever I could was a privilege, to learn from them humbling, to be inspired by them rewarding, and at times to be left beaming and rejoicing at the things they did and the stories they wrote was simply, as they would say, "awesome". There are too many to name, but they will know who they are. My grateful thanks to each one of them. And to think, semester after semester, group after group, we maintained a great team spirit as well – and even had fun! What more could one ask?

To the various members of staff with whom I worked at UQ, again too many to mention, my thanks for your contribution to the "cause" and for the contribution you made to my knowledge of journalism and therefore your contribution to this book. I can only hope the product matches the contributions you made to it.

There are many others who helped in all kinds of ways. Staff in many departments in the university, my various bosses for supporting our efforts to do some good journalism, journalists and editors in the business in various parts of the country and supporters of the papers we produced for more than a decade.

Some should be named – and probably deserve awards: Grant Dobinson, for effort beyond the call of duty in teaching me what I know about computers and how to make them do things; Bob Bottom and Evan Whitton, for the challenges and example they set through their journalism and their books and for the unfailing light they shed on the matter of what journalism is about; one who must remain unnamed for his encouragement to go on when there was no shortage of discouragement to do so; Mark Jones and his staff at Biggs and Biggs, who provided great support and equally great advice (for nothing, bless them) which kept the defamation writs at bay; and the guys on the floor and in the plate room at Rural Press who always managed to get the paper printed even if we messed up.

There are some of the team who will never be forgotten: Jason, for his remarkable reporting in the first year of the Weekend Independent; Paula, for what is still the most extraordinary example of sustained, quality and defiant journalism I have had the pleasure to be associated with as a teacher; Chris, who in an extraordinary effort sat at night for the equivalent of a week in a Datsun 120Y and kept a diary of how security firms were not fulfilling their contracts with the businesses that employed them; George, who among other things nailed a lie that the population had been fed for almost a decade; Susann, who not only chased some of our major stories but who made the Justice Project (justiceproject.net) possible; Alyssa, who also gave them hell, kept the Justice Project running and made me laugh whenever that was necessary; the wonderful Eleanor, without whom the Independent Monthly would almost certainly never have made deadline; and Henrik, who also volunteered his knowledge and time to assist the cause. And that's only a few. Extraordinary young people. How lucky I was.

Throughout much of the last 16 years there was Kevin Lindeberg, whose fight to see honesty, integrity and justice prevail was nothing short of monumental. He was an inspiration and a source of energy to pursue a story that is now recognised internationally as one of the great public administration scandals of the twentieth century: Australia's J'Accuse. Without his dogged determination I would not have had the raw material nor the drive to chase the story and help unravel as much of it as we have.

My long-suffering family has had to cope with this odyssey, and with the various publications I have edited and superintended. Who knows how many phone calls cornered so much of my time, and the wild goose chases I went on looking for people who did not even exist because the names I had been given were wrong, and the thousands of kilometres trying to find some victim of abuse at the hands of one of the Churches or the State. These trips and activities were vital to me. They meant I could still say I was a journalist and those in my classes could know that maybe I could justify standing up in front of them making noises about journalism. Brother Geof was always there, constantly encouraging, but most unhappy that I should write this book instead of the one about the odyssey. Merle and Melissa and Lindsay just put up with it, did whatever I asked and let me get on with the job. They missed out on who knows how many weekends and how many nights when deadlines came around, but did not complain. Without their consideration there would have been no Weekend Independent and no Independent Monthly and no Inside Queensland, and the stories of so many kids who suffered such appalling abuse would never have been told.

x Acknowledgments

This book is dedicated to them, and to the students who worked with me side by side.

Finally, I wish to acknowledge the support, courtesy and help I received from everyone at Cambridge University Press. It was a pleasure to work with such professional and considerate people. Thanks in particular to Jill Henry, Kate Indigo and the absolutely amazing Helena Bond.
