absenteeism, and nobility, 87, 113
administration: and conflicts of powers in late eighteenth century, 238–9; customs of under Ancien Régime, 62–70; and municipal governments of towns as institution of Ancien Régime, 47–54, 212–22, 232–4; and religious government of ecclesiastical provinces, 244–5; revolution in at end of eighteenth century, 170–9; and village government in Île-de-France, 222–5. See also centralization agriculture: and central government of Ancien Régime, 45; class and societies for, 229; roles of intendant and comptroller general in societies for, 154. See also famine Aigues-Mortes (district), 190
Algeria, administrative centralization of Ancien Régime in Canada compared to, 226 America: and English system of decentralization, 226, 227; and role of religion in society, 140; and rural parishes of Middle Ages compared to New England townships, 52. See also American Revolution
American Revolution, 133–4
Ancien Régime: and administrative centralization, 39–46, 59–61, 225–7; condition of peasants in eighteenth century compared to thirteenth century, 112–24; courts and immunity of public officials in, 55–8; and customs of administration, 62–70; destruction of political liberty and separation of classes as fatal to, 93–101; divisions and uniformity in society, 76–9; emergence of French Revolution from, 179–85; and irreligion, 136–42; isolation of social groups during, 80–92; kind of liberty under, 102–11; and men of letters as leading politicians, 127–35; and municipal governments of towns, 47–54; moderating forces on, 246–7; and prosperity during reign of Louis XVI, 152–9; and revolutionary education of people, 166–9; sovereign influence of Paris during, 71–5; Tocqueville on study of, 1–3. See also France; monarchy

The Ancien Régime and the French Revolution (Tocqueville): as expression of Tocqueville’s personal philosophy, xxv–xxviii; and genre of history, xiii–xiv; modern editions of, xxix; structure of and relation to planned second volume, xv–xxv; as work of structural analysis and social science, xiii–xv
Index

Andrieux, François, xvi
Angers (town), 212–22
Anjou (province), 114, 212, 262, 263
d’Argenson, Marquis, 42, 62
aristocracy, in England, 80–1, 93.
See also nobility
asylum, and feudal dues, 261–2
Auch (province), 173
Austria, and serfdom, 201
Auvergne (province), 83, 263, 269
banalités, 262–3
banvin, droit de, 263
Ban des vendanges, 263
Baudouin, Abbé, 149, 147
Beaucaire, Pierre de, 158
beggars and begging, in countryside during eighteenth century, 121, 252
Berry (province), 116, 119, 245, 265
Blackstone, William, 253, 254
blairie, droit de, 263
Bolingbroke, Henry St. John, 149
Bordeaux (province), 155
bordelage, 260–1
Boulogne, Raymond, xxx
Boulainvilliers, Henri de, 193
Bourbonnais (province), 263
bourgeoisie: changes in between fourteenth and eighteenth centuries, 83; definition of under Ancien Régime, 391; education of in Ancien Régime, 79; fragmentation of in prerevolutionary period, xx; isolation from nobility in late eighteenth century, 86–7, 90–1, 124; and law code of Frederick the Great, 203–4; movement of to towns, 114; and political liberty under Ancien Régime, 107; and public offices under Ancien Régime, 64, 88–9; and respect for religion, 141; use of term and characteristics of, 221. See also class Brittany (province), 157, 194, 262, 265, 267
Brogan, Hugh, xxix
Burgundy (province), 263, 269
Burke, Edmund, 12, 13–14, 27, 73, 77, 85, 131, 181
cahiers (grievance books), 2, 12–13, 86, 104, 106, 131, 234–44
Canada, and administrative centralization of Ancien Régime, 225–7 carpet, 261
caste, view of nobility as, 80, 81, 82, 84
Catholicism. See Church; clergy
cens, 260, 268, 270
centralization: and abandonment of countryside by nobility, 114; and Ancien Régime in Canada, 225–7; barriers to in Ancien Régime, xxvi; development of in Ancien Régime, 59–61; and municipal government of towns, 51; as product of Ancien Régime, 39–46; restoration of at beginning of nineteenth century, 70, 183
Cette (port), 190
Cévennes (district), 189
chambellage, 260
Champagne (province), 83
charitable foundations, and reign of Louis XVI, 167–8. See also poverty and poor relief
Charles VII, 04–5
Charles VIII, 215
Cherbourg (city), 207–8
China, and Economists, 147
Chosseul, Duc de, 121
Christianity, and proselytism, 20. See also Church; religion Church: and feudal system, 36; and grievance books of nobility, 239–40; and irreligion as dominant view in eighteenth century, 138; limits on ecclesiastical power of under Ancien Régime, 104–5; poverty in rural areas and alienation of peasants from, 165; and state as overseer of convents, 225. See also clergy; religion cities. See Paris; town(s)
Index

class: and administrative officials of Ancien Régime, 64; relationship between middle classes and aristocracy in England, 86; separation of as fatal to Ancien Régime, 93–101. See also bourgeoisie; nobility; peasants clergy: feudal dues owned by, 207–10; and individual liberty under Ancien Régime, 106; privileges of and alienation of people, 247–8; and provincial government of Languedoc, 195; and public administration of Ancien Régime, 104–5, 245; and residence of priests in countryside, 114–15. See also Church
Colbert, Jean Baptiste, 90, 226
Cologne (electorship), xxiv, 206
Commune, 188
comparative method, and The Ancien Régime and the French Revolution as work of social science, xv comptroller general: and administrative centralization of Ancien Régime, 41; and customs of administration, 62–3; role of in 1740 compared to 1780, 61, 153–4 concession, and responses of governments to crisis, xxi, xxii–xxiii Constituent Assembly, 73 constituencies: and administrative justice in postrevolutionary period, 57; and grievance books of nobility, 241–2; and provincial government of Languedoc, 193, 195; of towns, 212, 213 council decrees: and administration of towns, 50; and centralization in final years of Ancien Régime, 44–6; and courts, 227–8; and customs of administration under Ancien Régime, 63, 66. See also King’s Council Cour des Aides, 108
courts: administrative justice and immunity of public officials in Ancien Régime, 55–8; and council decrees, 227–8; and English legal system, 254–5; and grievance books of nobility, 243; legislative power of in Ancien Régime, 40; and liberty under Ancien Régime, 108–9; and royal edicts of Louis XVI, 170–1. See also criminal justice; law and legal system criminal justice: and government practices during reign of Louis XVI, 168–9; and grievance books of nobility, 235–6. See also courts; law and legal system; police Dauphiné (province), xxiv, 267
Davies, James, xxx
Declaration of the Rights of Man (1791), 201
democracy: and despotism, 147; and government of rural parishes in eighteenth century, 53
Democracy in America (Tocqueville), xv
Department of Bridges and Roads, 44, 58, 97, 167 despotism: democratic form of, 147; and desire for acquisition of wealth, 5–6 diachronic paradox, xx–xxi Diderot, Denis, 63, 139
diversity: of administration of Ancien Régime, 40; of laws and courts in England, 253–4 draft lottery of 1769, 118
Droz, Joseph, xxx
Duchâtellet, Mme., 162 dynamics, of revolution, xxiv–xxv, xxviii economics. See poverty and poor relief; price controls; taxation; wealth Economists, 143–51
Edict of Nantes (1685), 158n1 education: of bourgeois and nobility during Ancien Régime, 79; government practices as form of revolutionary, 166–69; and grievance books of nobility, 237, 244; as protection against abuse of political power, 145. See also literacy elections, of town officials, 53–4 elites, fragmentation of in prerevolutionary period, xxv. See also aristocracy; intellectuals; nobility
Index

Engels, Friedrich, xiv
England: abolition of feudal system in seventeenth century, 25; and characteristics of aristocracy, 80–1, 94; and civil war, 176–7; and feudal dues, 36–7; distribution of wealth in, 150; and increase in wealth of nobility, 78; and irreligious philosophy, 140; and judicial laws, 253–6; land ownership by peasants in, 33, 35; medieval political institutions in, 23; relationship between middle classes and aristocracy in, 86; and role of intellectuals in politics, 133; and view of French Revolution, 12; Voltaire’s letters on, 143
envy, and Tocqueville’s use of term “hatred,” xviii equality: and despotism, 6; and emergence of French Revolution from Ancien Régime, 182–3, 184. See also freedom; liberty Europe, and systems of law in Middle Ages, 22–5, 107–9. See also England; France; Germany évocation, and administrative justice, 56, 57, 58 factories, growth of in Paris during eighteenth century, 74–5 famine, and poverty relief efforts, 161 ferries, and feudal dues, 264 feudalism: abolition of in seventeenth-century England, 25; and feudal dues owned by priests, 207–10; and feudal dues still in existence at time of French Revolution, 35–8, 259–68; and socialism, 167; and status of in eighteenth-century France, 31–8; and vassals, 82–3. See also serfdom fief, 260
fishing, and feudal dues, 266, 268 Forbonnais, François Véron de, 95 France: and feudal prerogatives in eighteenth century, 31–8; medieval political institutions in, 23; unique character of history of, 184–5; views of on eve of Revolution, 12–13. See also Ancien Régime; French Revolution franc-fief, 237
Franche-Comté (province), 78
Franklin, Benjamin, xxv
Frederick the Great, 270, 277, 281, 289, 300, 315–19, 216
Frederick William I, n
Frederick William II, 204
freedom: and emergence of French Revolution from Ancien Régime, 182–3; and grievance books of nobility, 235–7; and relationship between despotism and acquisition of wealth, 6. See also equality; liberty freehold, 260
free vote, 4
Frémoy, Edme de, 82, 260
French Revolution: administrative revolution preceding political revolution of, 170–8; and American Revolution, 133–4; compared to religious revolutions, 19–21; emergence of from Ancien Régime, 179–85; essential achievement of, 26–7; feudal dues still in existence at time of, 259–68; influence of irreligion on, 136–42; and kind of liberty under Ancien Régime, 102–11; and poverty relief efforts, 160–5; prosperity during reign of Louis XVI and onset of, 152–9; and reinvigoration of principles of Ancien Régime, 61; reform and liberty as goals of, 143–51; Tocqueville’s purpose in study of, 3–7; universal curiosity about outside of France, 11–12; as war on religion, 15–18. See also revolution
Index

Furet, François, xiv, xxx

Galicia (Spain), 164

Gannett, Robert T., xxix

Gazette de France (newspaper), 64–5

gentilhomme, meaning of in France, 82
gentleman, use of term in England, 81–2

Germany: courts and administrative justice in, 55; and code of Frederick the Great, 201–5; and independent city-states, 199–200; medieval political institutions in, 23, 24–5; peasants and land ownership in, 33, 35, 205–6; and progressivism in late eighteenth century, 253; and Roman law, 197–9; and serfdom, 31–2, 200–1, 203; tax privileges of nobility, 85; vestiges of feudalism in, 82; and views of French Revolution, 11–12; and wealth of nobility, 78 government. See administration; Ancien Régime; centralization; politics grievance books. See cahiers ground rents, 268

guilds: destruction and partial reinstatement of, 170; original function of, 98; and right to work efforts, 161. See also industry

Guyenne (province), 117

hatred, and Tocqueville’s use of term “envy,” xviii

Haute Guyenne (district), 154, 163, 211, 227, 245

Henri IV, 100, 112

Henry III, 98

history: position of The Ancien Régime and the French Revolution in genre of, xiii–xiv; and unique character of France, 184–5; and use of words gentleman and gentilhomme, 81–2

hobereaux (hobby-hawks), 113

Hume, David, 139

Hungary, and Soviet intervention, xxii

hunting rights, and feudalism, 301, 308, 216–22, 227–8

Île-de-France (district), xx, 156–7, 222–5, 258–9

implicit contract, and obligations of nobility, xviii

individualism, and isolation of social groups in France, 91 industry: grievance books of nobility and freedom of, 236; regulation of by intendants, 211–12. See also guilds intellectuals, as leading politicians in middle of eighteenth century, 127–35. See also Economists; philosophy; Physiocrats intendants: and administrative centralization of Ancien Régime, 41–2, 43, 45, 56–7, 60; and government of Languedoc, 189; and municipal government, 53–4, 219–21; power of at end of eighteenth century, 171, 172–3; and regulation of industry, 211–12; role of in 1780 compared to 1780, 61, 153–4

Ireland, and English legal system, 253, 254

irony, Tocqueville’s use of, xxvi–xxvii isolation: and condition of peasants in eighteenth century, 122; of social groups during Ancien Régime, 80–92, 115, 124

Ivry (village), 222–5

Jardin, André, xxix

judicial system. See courts; criminal justice

July Revolution (1830), xxvii

King’s Council: and administration of towns, 50; and centralization in Ancien Régime, 40–1, 42–3, 44, 45;
Index

role of in courts and administrative justice, 56, 58. See also council decrees labor, and compulsory service: arbitrary imprisonment for, 248–9; attempt to abolish by Louis XVI, 160–1; and condition of peasants in eighteenth century, 119–20, 250–1; and feudalism in eighteenth century, 36, 262, 268; and grievance books of nobility, 237; and transportation of convicts, 240–50

La Flèche (town), 91
La Marche (district), 263
La Martinière, Alphonse de, xxvii land ownership: and forms of property holding in prerevolutionary France, 269–70; and reforms during reign of Louis XIV, 167; status of in eighteenth-century Europe, 32–4, 37–8, 205–7. See also property language: and descriptions of peasants, 163–4, 258; and history of words gentleman and gentilhomme, 81–2 Languedoc (province), 105, 117, 188–95
La Rivière, Mercier de, 146
Laval (town), 207
Lavoisier, Antoine, 86
Law, John, 42
law and legal system: abolishment of religious during French Revolution, 142; Ancien Régime and respect for, 67; and English judicial system, 253–6; and Frederick the Great in Germany, 201–5; systems of in Europe during Middle Ages, 22–5, 197–9; and town government in eighteenth-century France, 48–54. See also courts; criminal justice
Lefebvre, Georges, xxix
Létrosne, G.-F., 98, 121, 144, 145, 146
leyde, 264
Liancourt, Duc de, 93–4
liberty: destruction of political as fatal to Ancien Régime, 93–101; kind of under Ancien Régime, 102–11; and reform as goal of French Revolution, 143–51. See also equality; freedom liberté, 270 Limousin (province), 78
literacy, status of in eighteenth-century France, 133.
See also education
lods et ventes, 260, 268
lords: and municipal councils, 175; and parish government, 52–3. See also nobility Lorraine (province), 173
Louis XI, xix, 47–8, 85, 212, 215
Louis XII, 100
Louis XIII, 193
Louis XIV, xix, 72, 84–5, 96, 98, 113, 158, 167, 225, 226, 264
Louis XV, 64–5, 96, 103, 166, 193
Louis XVI, 74, 98, 100, 109, 131, 134, 152–9, 160–5, 166–9, 170, 244
Lower Normandy (province), 119, 154, 163, 167, 176
Machault, M. de, 149
Maine (province), 117, 212, 228, 262, 263
Maistre, M. de, 13
manorial land books. See terriers mariaige, 261
Markoff, John, xiv, xxx
Mayenne (district), 247
Mélonio, Françoise, xxx
men of letters. See intellectuals
Michelet, Jules, xxix
Middle Ages, and systems of law in Europe, 22–5, 197–9 military and militia: and compulsory labor, 250; and conscription, 43, 118–19, 236; and grievance books of nobility, 239; and recruitment of peasants, 118–19
Mill, John Stuart, xxix
Mirabeau, Comte de, 17, 18, 136
Mirabeau, Marquis de, 67, 71–2
Molière, 81
Mollien, M., 154
Index

monarchy: in Europe of Middle Ages, 25, 199; and executive power in grievance books of nobility, 243.
See also Ancien Régime

Montbazon (town), 247

Montesquieu, Baron de, 71, 81, 114

Morelly, Abbé, 148

Napoleon, 15

National Convention, 172

Necker, M., 32, 34, 85, 121–2, 155, 156, 234

newspapers, and administration of Ancien Régime, 64–5.
See also press

Nivernais (province), 263, 266

nobility: abandonment of countryside by, 112–14; as caste, 80, 81, 82, 84; exemption of from taxation, xvi–xviii; feudalism and privileges and powers of, 37; and grievance books, 234–44; and intellectuals in eighteenth century, 130–1; isolation from bourgeoisie in late eighteenth century, 86–7, 123–4; and land ownership, 206; and law code of Frederick the Great, 203, 204; and liberty under Ancien Régime, 103–4; and petitions to Ancien Régime, 69; and provincial government of Languedoc, 104–5; and respect for religion, 140–1; and seigniorial rents in provinces, 228; and society of Ancien Régime, 77–8.
See also aristocracy; class; lords

Noelle-Neumann, Elisabeth, xxx

Noisai (parish), 247

Normandy (province), 228, 267

notables, and general assembly, 49

oligarchy, and municipal government in eighteenth century, 50 oppression, and condition of peasants in eighteenth century, 121–2.

See also repression

Orry, M., 119

paganism, and relationship of religion to state, 20

Palmer, Robert, xxx

parcière, 261

Paris: advantages enjoyed by during Ancien Régime, 256–7; and feudal dues, 261, 262, 269; and revision of terrier, 270; sovereign influence of during Ancien Régime, 71–5

Paris Parlement (1770), 108

See also villages

pays d’élection, 39–40, 171, 190

pays d’états, 39, 117, 157, 188, 248

peasants: condition of in eighteenth century compared to thirteenth century, 112–24; and feudal dues owned by priests, 208–10; isolation of bourgeoisie from, 88; and land ownership in eighteenth-century Europe, 32–4, 205–6; and law code of Frederick the Great, 203; negative language in descriptions of, 163–4, 258.
See also class; labor

Pérèfixe, M. de, 112

petitions, as source of information on administration of Ancien Régime, 69. See also cahiers philosophy: The Ancien Régime and the French Revolution as expression of Tocqueville’s personal, xxi–xxviii; eighteenth-century schools of as cause of French Revolution, 15, 16; political forms of in eighteenth century, 128, 130.

See also Economists; intellectuals; Physiocrats

Physiocrats, 119

Pitt, William, 13

Poitou (province), 157, 269

Poland, and free elections in 1980, xxii police: and centralization of administration in Ancien Régime, 44, 68, 227; and treatment of 277

Index

peasants, 251–2. See also criminal justice politics: and grievance books of nobility, 240–1; and men of letters as politicians in middle of eighteenth century, 127–35. See also democracy; despotism; monarchy; power; reform; socialism popular sovereignty, 4 population, increase of in Paris of eighteenth century, 74 poverty and poor relief: and centralization in Ancien Régime, 45; concern for during reign of Louis XVI, 154; and condition of peasants in eighteenth century, 118; and favoritism in public charity delivered by state, 210–11; and French Revolution, 160–5; grievance books of nobility and distribution of, 238. See also famine power: and centralization of Ancien Régime, 60; and conflicts in administration in 1787, 258–9; grievance books of nobility on separation of, 242–4; of intendants, 171, 172–3; and public education, 145; and role of Church in politics, 138; and social change as objective of French Revolution, 17; of tax collectors, 116–17; understanding of limits of by Ancien Régime, 103
precipitants, of revolution, xvi, xx preconditions, for revolution, xv–xvi, xx preemption, and responses of governments to crisis, xxi, xxiii press, grievance books of nobility and freedom of, 236–7. See also newspapers; printing price controls, precedents for under Ancien Régime, 168 printing, growth of at end of eighteenth century, 72–3 progressivism, in late eighteenth-century Germany and France, 253 propaganda, and religious revolutions, 21 property, and grievance books of nobility, 236. See also land ownership proselytism, and religious revolutions, 20, 21 provinces: and assemblies, 172, 173, 245; class and society in, 77; and funding of public works, 180, 190–2; and governors, 41; and influence of Paris during Ancien Régime, 73; Three Estates and administration of, 187–8 Prussian code of 1795, 45
public offices: and administration of towns, 215–18; bourgeois and minor posts under Ancien Régime, 88–9; practice of selling, 99
public service, of nobility, xviii public works: and centralization in Ancien Régime, 44; private property and government practices in late eighteenth century, 167; provincial funding of in Languedoc, 189, 190–2. See also roads Quesnay, François, 144, 145, 146, 148
Recollections: The French Revolution of 1848 (Tocqueville), xxvii, xxix reform: and administration of countryside, 174; and liberty as goal of French Revolution, 143–51; and reign of Louis XVI, 166–9 religion: and Frederick the Great on Deism, 252–3; French Revolution as war on, 15–18; and government of ecclesiastical provinces, 244–5; grievance books of nobility and freedom of, 236; and influence of irreligion on French Revolution, 136–42; and religious revolutions compared to French Revolution, 19–21, 165. See also Church; clergy Religion, Wars of (sixteenth century), 19–21, 164n3, 165
Renauldon, Charles, 260, 264, 267–8 repression, and responses of governments to crisis, xxi–xxii. See also oppression resistance, to administration of Ancien Régime, 103 revolution: in administrative practices of Ancien Régime, 170–8; Ancien Régime and education of people in, 166–9; dynamics of, xxiv–xxv, xxviii; French Revolution compared to religious forms of, 19–21; and peasant revolts in fourteenth century, 164–1; precipitants of, xvi, xx; preconditions for and triggers of, xv–xvi, xx, xxiv. See also American Revolution; French Revolution; Revolution of 1848

Richelieu, Cardinal, 90, 113, 118 rights: and grievance books of nobility, 235, 240–1; modern conceptions of contrasted to Ancien Régime, xxvi; and seigniorial justice, 267–8. See also equality; freedom; liberty roads: and administrative centralization in Ancien Régime, 44, 228; and feudal dues, 265; provincial maintenance of in Languedoc, 190–1. See also public works

Rodez (town), 245

Roman law, 22, 197–9

Rousseau, Jean-Jacques, 63

Schiller, Friedrich von, 19

Scotland, and English legal system, 253, 254

“second-best” political systems, xv serfdom: and Germany in eighteenth century, 31–2, 200–1, 203; grievance books of nobility and abolition of, 235, 244. See also feudalism

servage, 261–2

Shapiro, Gilbert, xiv, xxx

slavery, and grievance books of nobility, 235

socialism: and Economists, 147–8; and feudalism, 167; and law code of Frederick the Great, 205

social science, The Ancien Régime and the French Revolution as work of, xiii, xiv, xv society: divisions and uniformity of during Ancien Régime, 76–9; and isolation during Ancien Régime, 80–92; role of religion in American, 140. See also class

Soviet Union, and nonintervention in Poland, xxii

Spanish Succession, War of, 152

Staël, Madame de, xxx

state: as overseer of convents, 298; use of term in Frederick the Great’s code of law, 202; in view of Economists, 146–7. See also Ancien Régime statistics, and administration under Ancien Régime, 63

Stone, Lawrence, xv–xvi

structural analysis, The Ancien Régime and the French Revolution as work of, xiii subdelegate: and administrative centralization of Ancien Régime, 42; and municipal government, 54, 218; and provincial assemblies, 173

synchronic paradox, xx–xxi

syndic: appointment of by intendant, 53–4; and parish government, 52, 175–6 taille (tax), 43, 87, 95, 115–16, 118, 194 taxation: and administration of countryside in late eighteenth century, 174; and causes of discontent, 87; exemption of nobility from, xvi–xviii, 84–5; and grievance books of nobility, 242; indirect versus direct, 95, 165; inequality of, 95–100, 230–2, 257; and King’s

Index

Council, 42–3; and principle of consent in fourteenth century, 94; and prosperity during reign of Louis XVI, 154; and provincial government of Languedoc, 190, 192–3. See also feudalism; taille tax collectors, 116–17

terrage (feudal tithes), 260, 268
terriers (manorial registers), 24, 82, 259, 270
Thiers, Adolphe, xxix
Thirty Years’ War, 190, 200
tithes. See terrage

Tocqueville, Alexis de: and The Ancien Régime and the French Revolution as expression of personal philosophy, xvi–xxviii; The Ancien Régime and the French Revolution and genre of history, xiii–xiv; biographies of, xxix; chronology of life, xxxi–xxxii; and study of Ancien Régime, 1–3; and study of French Revolution, 3–7

“Tocqueville effect,” xiv–xx, xxiii, xxx tills, and feudal dues, 264, 268
Toulouse (province), 162
Touraine (town), 212, 228
Tours (district), 154, 210, 219, 250, 257, 261 town(s): administration of during Ancien Régime, 40, 191, 212–22, 232–4; constitutions of, 212, 213; decline of in eighteenth century, xix–xx; migration of bourgeois to, 114; and municipal governments during Ancien Régime, 47–54. See also villages town councils, 48–9

tragedy, sense of in Tocqueville’s historical analysis, xxvi

triggers, of revolution, xvi, xxiv
Troyes (district), 266

United States. See America

vassals, and feudalism, 82–3
Vauban, Sébastien de, 152
Veyne, Paul, xiv

villages: and administrative revolution in late eighteenth century, 174; as communities in eighteenth century, 115; and government of Languedoc, 191; and municipal governments in eighteenth century, 51, 54, 222–5. See also parishes; town(s) violence, and contrast between benign character of theories and acts of French Revolution, 181

Voltaire, 115, 137, 143, 149

waters, feudal dues and regulation of use, 265–6 wealth: despotism and desire for acquisition of, 5–6; of nobility under Ancien Régime, 78; prosperity as factor in French Revolution, 152–9

Weber, Max, xiv

Westphalia, Treaty of, 199

Young, Arthur, 12, 33, 73, 93–4, 155, 191, 231