CONDUCTING LAW AND SOCIETY RESEARCH

Through interviews with many of the most noteworthy authors in law and society, Conducting Law and Society Research takes students and scholars behind the scenes of empirical scholarship, showing the messy reality of research methods. The challenges and the uncertainties, so often missing from research methods textbooks, are revealed in candid detail. These accessible and revealing conversations about the lived reality of classic projects will be a source of encouragement and inspiration to those embarking on empirical research, ranging across the full array of disciplines that contribute to law and society. For all of the ambiguities and challenges to the social “scientific” study of law, the reflections found in this book – collectively capturing a portrait of the field through the window of research efforts – individually remind readers that “good research” displays not an absence of problems, but the care taken in negotiating them.

Simon Halliday has a Ph.D. in sociolegal studies from Strathclyde University. He is author of Judicial Review and Compliance with Administrative Law (2004) and The Appeal of Internal Review: Law, Administrative Justice, and the (Non-) Emergence of Disputes (2003). He is coeditor (with Marc Hertogh) of Judicial Review and Bureaucratic Impact: International and Interdisciplinary Perspectives (2004) and has published articles in journals, such as the Journal of Law and Society, the British Journal of Criminology, and Public Law. Currently Professor at the Law School of Strathclyde University and Conjoint Professor in the Faculty of Law of the University of New South Wales, he was previously the Nicholas de B. Katzenbach Research Fellow at Balliol College and at the Centre for Socio-Legal Studies, Oxford University.

Patrick Schmidt has a Ph.D. in political science from Johns Hopkins University. He is the author of Lawyers and Regulation: The Politics of the Administrative Process (2005) and of articles in various journals, including Law and History Review, Judicature, Justice System Journal, and Political Research Quarterly. Currently Associate Professor of Political Science at Macalester College, he was previously Assistant Professor of Political Science at Southern Methodist University, the John Adams Research Fellow at the Centre for Socio-Legal Studies, and Junior Research Fellow at Nuffield College, Oxford.

Cambridge Studies in Law and Society aims to publish the best scholarly work on legal discourse and practice in its social and institutional contexts, combining theoretical insights and empirical research.

The fields that it covers are: studies of law in action; the sociology of law; the anthropology of law; cultural studies of law, including the role of legal discourses in social formations; law and economics; law and politics; and studies of governance. The books consider all forms of legal discourse across societies, rather than being limited to lawyers’ discourses alone.

The series editors come from a range of disciplines: academic law, socio-legal studies, sociology, and anthropology. All have been actively involved in teaching and writing about law in context.

Series Editors

Chris Arup
Monash University, Victoria

Martin Chanock
La Trobe University, Melbourne

Pat O’Malley
University of Sydney

Sally Engle Merry
New York University

Susan Silbey
Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Books in the Series

Diseases of the Will Mariana Valverde

The Politics of Truth and Reconciliation in South Africa: Legitimizing the Post-Apartheid State
Richard A. Wilson

Modernism and the Grounds of Law
Peter Fitzpatrick

Unemployment and Government: Genealogies of the Social
William Walters

Autonomy and Ethnicity: Negotiating Competing Claims in Multi-Ethnic States
Yash Ghai

(Continued after Index)
CONDUCTING LAW AND SOCIETY RESEARCH

Reflections on Methods and Practices

Simon Halliday
Strathclyde University
University of New South Wales

Patrick Schmidt
Macalester College
CONTENTS

List of Contributors

Acknowledgments

1 Introduction: Beyond Methods – Law and Society in Action
   Patrick Schmidt and Simon Halliday

2 Stewart Macaulay and “Non-Contractual Relations in Business”

3 Robert Kagan and Regulatory Justice

4 Malcolm Feeley and The Process Is the Punishment

5 Lawrence Friedman and The Roots of Justice

6 John Heinz and Edward Laumann and Chicago Lawyers

7 Alan Paterson and The Law Lords

8 David Engel and “The Oven Bird’s Song”

9 Keith Hawkins and Environment and Enforcement

10 Carol Greenhouse and Praying for Justice

11 John Conley and William O’Barr and Rules versus Relationships

12 Sally Engle Merry and Getting Justice and Getting Even

13 Tom Tyler and Why People Obey the Law

14 Doreen McBarnet and “Whiter than White Collar Crime”

15 Gerald Rosenberg and The Hollow Hope

16 Michael McCann and Rights at Work

page ix

xiii

1

14

26

39

50

59

72

83

94

105

117

129

141

152

163

174
CONTENTS

17 Austin Sarat and William Felstiner and Divorce Lawyers and Their Clients 187
18 Yves Dezalay and Bryant Garth and Dealing in Virtue 200
19 Patricia Ewick and Susan Silbey and The Common Place of Law 214
20 Hazel Genn and Paths to Justice 227
21 John Braithwaite and Peter Drahos and Global Business Regulation 240
22 John Hagan and Justice in the Balkans 252
23 Conclusion: “Research Is a Messy Business” – An Archeology of the Craft of Sociolegal Research 264

Herbert M. Kritzer

Index 286
LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS

John Braithwaite is Professor at the Regulatory Institutions Network of the Australian National University and an Australian Research Council Federation Fellow.

John Conley is the William Rand Kenan Jr. Professor of Law at the University of North Carolina.

Yves Dezalay is Directeur de Recherche at the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique (CNRS), attached to the Centre de Sociologie Européenne (CSE), and based at the Maison des Sciences de l'Homme (MSH), Paris.

Peter Drahos is Professor at the Regulatory Institutions Network of the Australian National University and Professor of Intellectual Property at Queen Mary, University of London.

David M. Engel is SUNY Distinguished Service Professor at the University at Buffalo Law School.

Patricia Ewick is Professor of Sociology at Clark University in Worcester, Massachusetts.

Malcolm M. Feeley is Clare Sanders Clements Dean’s Professor of the Jurisprudence and Social Policy Program at the University of California at Berkeley.

William L. F. Felstiner taught law and sociology at UCLA and UCSB, was Director of the American Bar Foundation and the International Institute for the Sociology of Law (Oñati), and is currently President of the Chad Relief Foundation.

Lawrence M. Friedman is the Marion Rice Kirkwood Professor of Law at Stanford University. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Bryant G. Garth is Dean of the Southwestern Law School in Los Angeles, California, and Director Emeritus of the American Bar Foundation.
LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS

Dame Hazel Genn is Dean of Laws, Professor of Socio-Legal Studies, and Co-Director of the Centre for Empirical Legal Studies in the Faculty of Laws of University College London, where she is also an Honorary Fellow.

Carol J. Greenhouse is Professor and Chair of the Department of Anthropology at Princeton University.

John Hagan is John D. MacArthur Professor of Sociology and Law at Northwestern University and Senior Research Fellow at the American Bar Foundation in Chicago.

Simon Halliday is Professor at the Law School of Strathclyde University, Conjoint Professor of Law at the University of New South Wales, and Associate Fellow at the Centre for Socio-Legal Studies, University of Oxford.

Keith Hawkins is Professor Emeritus of Law and Society at Oxford University, Fellow Emeritus of Oriel College, Oxford, and Visiting Professor at the Centre for the Analysis of Risk and Regulation of the London School of Economics.

John P. Heinz is Senior Research Fellow at the American Bar Foundation and the Owen L. Coon Professor Emeritus at the Northwestern University School of Law.

Robert A. Kagan is Professor of Political Science and Emanuel S. Heller Professor of Law at the University of California, Berkeley.

Herbert Kritzer is Professor of Law at William Mitchell College of Law and formerly was Professor of Political Science at the University of Wisconsin–Madison.

Edward O. Laumann is the George Herbert Mead Distinguished Service Professor of Sociology at the University of Chicago.

Stewart Macaulay is the Malcolm Pitman Sharp Hilldale Professor and Theodore W. Brazeau Professor of Law at the University of Wisconsin–Madison.

Doreen McBarnet is Professor of Socio-Legal Studies at the University of Oxford and Visiting Professor at the Edinburgh University Law School.

Michael McCann is Gordon Hirabayashi Professor for the Advancement of Citizenship and Director of the Law, Societies, and Justice Program of the University of Washington.

Sally Engle Merry is Professor of Anthropology and Director of the Program on Law and Society at New York University.
LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS

William O’Barr is Professor in the Department of Cultural Anthropology at Duke University.

Alan Paterson is Professor of Law and Director of the Centre for Professional Legal Studies at Strathclyde University.

Gerald N. Rosenberg is Associate Professor of Political Science and Lecturer in Law at the University of Chicago.

Austin Sarat is William Nelson Cromwell Professor of Jurisprudence and Political Science, Five College Fortieth Anniversary Professor, and Senior Advisor to the Dean of the Faculty at Amherst College.

Patrick Schmidt is Associate Professor of Political Science at Macalester College.

Susan S. Silbey is Leon and Anne Goldberg Professor of Sociology and Anthropology and Head of the Department of Anthropology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Tom Tyler is University Professor at New York University, Psychology Department and Law School.
The participants in this book repeatedly observe in these interviews that good scholarship depends on the direct and indirect support of others. Although we have long been convinced of this, once again we are reminded of our debt.

Numerous friends and colleagues were willing to read the project proposal or discuss its concept at one stage or another, and they helped us refine our ambition for this book. We mention in particular Sarah Armstrong, Lindsay Farmer, Joel Grossman, Erik Larson, Mikael Madsen, Bronwen Morgan, Anna Russell, David Yalof, and others whose names we inadvertently may have forgotten. We are also grateful to Andrew Hass for conversations about serendipity in the arts and to Brent Plate and Edna Rodriguez-Plate for a unique perspective on socio-legal methodologies.

Three anonymous reviewers join the named colleagues as important influences on this book. The participants in this project, themselves, displayed enough good humor to agree to the interviews; they also provided many helpful comments, much patience during the editing process, and great enthusiasm. Because they are some of the most experienced researchers and teachers in the field, their concurrence about the need for this book gave us additional momentum.

Our colleagues in our respective institutions – the Law School at Strathclyde University and the University of New South Wales and the Department of Political Science at Macalester College – have encouraged us throughout the writing of this book, and our institutions have generously supported this work. Patrick received essential funding through the support of a Wallace Travel Grant from Macalester College. Simon enjoyed a generous grant from the Law School of Strathclyde University to fund travel, accommodation, and transcription costs.

Cambridge University Press, embodied at every stage through our editor, John Berger, has been supportive from Day 2 of this project. We also thank Mary Cadette and Christie Polchowski for the high standard of care and attention to the preparation of the manuscript, and Melanie Sims for her sterling efforts with the index.

We also acknowledge the role played by St. Arnold, the patron saint of brewers. It was in a brew pub that the idea for this book was conceived, and it seems that there has since been a guiding hand ensuring the satisfying refreshment of beer in the four countries in which we worked on this project (U.S.A., U.K., Australia, and Germany).

The personal dimension of one's professional life always emerges in any candid discussion of research, and so it does here too. Patrick professes, against assertions to the contrary, that he truly understands the burden borne by his wife, Lea Anne, and their three children, Ailsa, Aidan, and Simon, during his numerous conference trips and late nights at the computer. As thanks, he offers his promise that one day he will write a book that may actually offer the hope of making the family rich. Until then, they have this book dedicated to them. Simon dedicates this book to his brother Mark, whose own engagement with research methods was something of an inspiration.