Dear Mr. Maguire,

I am writing about the job advertised in The Washington Times for an Italian chef at The Excelor Hotel. As I trained in Italy, I am very interested in this position. I specialized in southern Italian and Sicilian seafood cuisine. As you can see from the résumé sent with this letter, I have worked at many first-class hotels, both here and abroad. During my nine years abroad I spent four years as the assistant chef at the Plazzi Hotel in Naples. I am now the head chef at the seafood restaurant in the Exbridge Hotel, Boston.

I am currently in charge of a large kitchen that has a staff of twelve people: eight full-time and four part-time. We serve over 1,600 meals per week. I am a true professional and take pride in my job. We make sure that each meal is prepared to the highest standard. I would very much value the chance to work for you at The Excelor Hotel and I believe I have the experience to help further develop the fine food that makes your restaurant one of the most famous places to dine in Washington.

Sincerely yours,
Allan Wright
