From Plato to Max Weber, the attempt to understand political judgement took the form of a struggle to define the relationship between politics and morals. This book by leading international scholars in the fields of history, philosophy and politics restores the subject to a place at the very centre of political theory and practice. Whilst it provides a range of perspectives on the theme of practical reason, it also explores a series of related problems in philosophy and political thought, raising fundamental questions about democracy, trust, the nature of statesmanship, and the relations between historical and political judgement. In the process, the volume reconsiders some classic debates in political theory – about equality, authority, responsibility and ideology – and offers new and original treatments of key figures in the history of political thought, including Thucydides, Montaigne, Locke, Smith, Burke and Marx.

Richard Bourke is Senior Lecturer in the Department of History at Queen Mary, University of London.

Raymond Geuss is Professor in the Faculty of Philosophy at the University of Cambridge.
Political Judgement

Essays for John Dunn

Edited by

RICHARD BOURKE
AND
RAYMOND GEUSS
Contents

List of contributors
Acknowledgements
Introduction

RICHARD BOURKE AND RAYMOND GEUSS

Part I     The character of political judgement
1 What is political judgement?
RAYMOND GEUSS
2 Sticky judgement and the role of rhetoric
VICTORIA MCGEER AND PHILIP PETTIT
3 Theory and practice: the revolution in political judgement
RICHARD BOURKE

Part II     Trust, judgement and consent
4 On trusting the judgement of our rulers
QUENTIN SKINNER
5 Adam Smith’s history of law and government as political theory
ISTVAN HONT
6 Marxism in translation: critical reflections on Indian radical thought
SUDIPTA KAVIRAJ

Part III     Rationality and judgement
7 Pericles’ unreason
GEOFFREY HAWTHORN

---

© in this web service Cambridge University Press
www.cambridge.org
Contents

8 Accounting for human actions: individual agency and political judgement in Montaigne’s Essais  229
   BIANCAMARIA FONTANA

9 Nehru’s judgement  254
   SUNIL KHILNANI

Part IV  Democracy and modern political judgement  279

10 Democracy, equality and redistribution  281
   ADAM PRZEWORSKI

11 Democracy and terrorism  313
   RICHARD TUCK

Bibliography of the works of John Dunn  333

Index  344
Contributors

Richard Bourke, Senior Lecturer in History, Queen Mary, University of London

Biancamaria Fontana, Professor of the History of Political Ideas, Institut d’Études Politiques et Internationales, Université de Lausanne

Raymond Geuss, Professor of Philosophy, University of Cambridge

Geoffrey Hawthorn, Emeritus Professor of International Politics, University of Cambridge

Istvan Hont, Reader in the History of Political Thought and Fellow of King’s College, University of Cambridge

Sudipta Kaviraj, Professor of Indian Politics and Intellectual History, Columbia University

Sunil Khilnani, Starr Foundation Professor and Director, South Asia Studies, School of Advanced International Studies, Johns Hopkins University

Victoria McGeer, Associate Research Scholar, Centre for Human Values, Princeton University

Philip Pettit, Laurance S. Rockefeller University Professor of Politics and Human Values, Princeton University

Adam Przeworski, Carroll and Milton Petrie Professor of Politics, New York University

Quentin Skinner, Barber Beaumont Professor of the Humanities, Queen Mary, University of London

Richard Tuck, Frank G. Thomson Professor of Government, Harvard University
Acknowledgements

The editors would like to thank John Haslam, Carrie Cheek, Karen Matthews, Thomas O’Reilly and Frances Brown at Cambridge University Press for their patience and skill in seeing this book through the editorial and production processes, and Dr Niall O’Flaherty of King’s College London for assistance in preparing the original manuscript. Richard Bourke would in addition like to express his gratitude to the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation for the award of a Fellowship which enabled him to undertake and complete his contribution to this volume. In this context he would also like to thank Professor Eckhart Hellmuth for hosting him during the tenure of his Fellowship in the Historical Institute at the University of Munich.