Ideas about law are undergoing dramatic change in Latin America. The consolidation of democracy as the predominant form of government and the proliferation of transnational legal instruments have ushered in an era of new legal conceptions and practices. Law has become a core focus of political movements and policy-making.

This volume explores the changing legal ideas and practices that accompany, cause, and are a consequence of the judicialization of politics in Latin America. It is the product of a three-year international research effort sponsored by the Law and Society Association, the Latin American Studies Association, and the Ford Foundation, which gathered leading and emerging scholars of Latin American courts from across disciplines and across continents.

Javier A. Couso is a Professor of Law at Universidad Diego Portales, Santiago, Chile. In 2006-7, Couso was the Tinker Distinguished Visiting Professor of Law at the University of Wisconsin–Madison. His work focuses on the study of Chilean and Latin American constitutional law and processes of judicialization of politics in the region. He has published extensively on such matters, in journals such as Democratization, Verfassung und Recht in Übersee (VRÜ), Griffith Law Review, and the Revista de Ciencia Política. He has also contributed chapters to a number of edited volumes.

Alexandra Huneeus is Assistant Professor of Law at the University of Wisconsin–Madison, where she is also a faculty member of the Legal Studies Program. Huneeus has been a postdoctoral Fellow at the Center on Democracy, Development, and the Rule of Law at Stanford University; a Visiting Scholar at Universidad Diego Portales, Chile; and a Fellow of the International Human Rights Clinic at the Berkeley Law School. Her research focuses on judicial politics and human rights in Latin America.

Rachel Sieder is Research Professor at the Centro de Investigaciones y Estudios Superiores en Antropología Social (CIESAS), Mexico City. She is also Affiliated Senior Researcher at the Chr. Michelsen Institute, University of Bergen, Norway. She was previously a Senior Lecturer in Politics at the Institute for the Study of the Americas, University of London, where she remains a research Fellow. She has published widely on indigenous rights, human rights, and sociolegal studies, with a particular geographical focus on Guatemala.
Cambridge Studies in Law and Society aims to publish the best scholarly work on legal discourse and practice in its social and institutional contexts, combining theoretical insights and empirical research. The fields that it covers are studies of law in action; the sociology of law; the anthropology of law; cultural studies of law, including the role of legal discourses in social formations; law and economics; law and politics; and studies of governance. The books consider all forms of legal discourse across societies, rather than being limited to lawyers’ discourses alone.

The series editors come from a range of disciplines: academic law, sociolegal studies, sociology, and anthropology. All have been actively involved in teaching and writing about law in context.

Series Editors

Chris Arup
Monash University, Victoria

Martin Chanock
La Trobe University, Melbourne

Pat O’Malley
University of Sydney

Sally Engle Merry
New York University

Susan Silbey
Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Books in the Series

The World Trade Organization Knowledge Agreements
2nd Edition
Christopher Arup

Law and Nature
David Delaney

Constitutionalizing Economic Globalization: Investment Rules and Democracy’s Promise
David Schneiderman

Law, Anthropology, and the Constitution of the Social: Making Persons and Things
Edited by Alain Pottage and Martha Mundy

Law and Globalization from Below: Towards a Cosmopolitan Legality
Edited by Boaventura de Sousa Santos and César A. Rodríguez-Garavito

Series list continues following the Index.
Cultures of Legality

JUDICIALIZATION AND POLITICAL ACTIVISM IN LATIN AMERICA

Edited by

JAVIER A. COUSO
Universidad Diego Portales

ALEXANDRA HUNETEUS
University of Wisconsin–Madison Law School

RACHEL SIEDER
Centro de Investigaciones y Estudios Superiores en Antropología Social (CIESAS)
Contents

Contributors ix

PART I  INTRODUCTION

1 Cultures of Legality: Judicialization and Political Activism in Contemporary Latin America
   Alexandra Huneeus, Javier Couso, and Rachel Sieder 3

PART II  COURTS AND JUDICIALIZATION THROUGH A CULTURAL LENS

2 Legal Language and Social Change during Colombia’s Economic Crisis
   Pablo Rueda 25

3 How Courts Work: Institutions, Culture, and the Brazilian Supremo Tribunal Federal Diana Kapiszewski 51

4 More Power, More Rights? The Supreme Court and Society in Mexico
   Karina Ansolabehere 78

5 Rejecting the Inter-American Court: Judicialization, National Courts, and Regional Human Rights
   Alexandra Huneeus 112

PART III  JUDICIALIZATION BEYOND THE COURTS

6 The Transformation of Constitutional Discourse and the Judicialization of Politics in Latin America
   Javier Couso 141
Contents

7 Legal Cultures in the (Un)Rule of Law: Indigenous Rights and Juridification in Guatemala
   Rachel Sieder 161

8 Political Activism and the Practice of Law in Venezuela
   Manuel A. Gomez 182

9 The Mapuche People's Battle for Indigenous Land: Litigation as a Strategy to Defend Indigenous Land Rights
   Anne Skjævestad 207

10 Judicialization in Argentina: Legal Culture or Opportunities and Support Structures?
    Catalina Smulovitz 234

11 Novel Appropriations of the Law in the Pursuit of Political and Social Change in Latin America
    Pilar Domingo 254

Index 279
Contributors

Karina Ansolabehere is Research Professor at the Latin American Faculty of Social Sciences in Mexico (FLACSO, Mexico). She has a sociology degree from the University of Buenos Aires and a doctorate in political science from FLACSO–Mexico. She specializes in judicial politics, human rights, and legal cultures in Latin America. Her recent publications include La política desde la justicia: Cortes Supremas, gobierno y democracia en Argentina y México (México: Fontamara-FLACSO, 2007); “Legalistas, legalistas moderados y garantistas moderados: ideología legal de maestros, jueces, abogados, ministerios públicos y diputados” (Revista Mexicana de Sociología, No. 2, 2008); “Una reflexión en torno de la caracterización de las cortes constitucionales” (Iberoamericana, Vol VIII, No. 31, 2008); “Poder Judicial, entre el protagonismo y la desorientación. Un poder en busca de su papel,” in Antonella Atilli (coord.), 30 años de cambio político en México (UAM–Ixtapalapa/Miguel Ángel Porrúa, 2006); “Inercias, intereses y miedo a la ciudadanía: Suprema Corte de Justicia, Libertades y Derechos” in Gustavo Fondevila, Instituciones, legalidad y estado de derecho (México: Fontamara, 2006); “Jueces, política y derecho: alcances de la politización de la justicia en Argentina y México,” in Isonomía: Revista de Teoría y Filosofía del Derecho, ITAM, No. 22, 2005.

Javier A. Couso is Associate Professor in the Law Faculty at the Diego Portales University in Santiago, Chile. He is also an Affiliate Professor of the University of Chile. He has a law degree from the Catholic University of Chile and a doctorate in jurisprudence and social policy from the University of California, Berkeley. Couso specializes in sociolegal studies, comparative public law, and judicial politics. His recent publications include “La Judicatura como organización” (Santiago, Chile: Instituto de Estudios Judiciales y Expansiva, 2007), coedited with Fernando Atria; “The Seduction of Judicially Triggered Social Transformation: The Impact of the ‘Warren Court’ in Latin America,” in Harry Scheiber (ed.), Earl Warren and the Warren Court: The Legacy in American and Foreign Law (Plymouth, UK: Lexington
Contributors

Pilar Domingo is Research Fellow in the Politics and Governance team at the Overseas Development Institute (ODI) in London. Previously she was a researcher at the Institute for Iberoamerican Studies at the University of Salamanca, Spain and Senior Lecturer at the Institute for the Study of the Americas, University of London. Her research interests include the rule of law, judicial politics, and human rights in Latin America. Her recent publications include “Judicialization of Politics or Politicization of the Judiciary? Recent Trends in Latin America,” in Democratization (2004); Courts and Social Transformation in New Democracies: An Institutional Voice for the Poor?, co-edited with Roberto Gargarella and Theunis Roux (Aldershot: Ashgate, 2006); Proclaiming Revolution: Bolivia in Comparative Perspective, co-edited with Merilee Grindle (London/ Harvard: ILAS/Harvard University Press, 2003); Democracia, participación y governabilidad en Bolivia 1993–2003: fin de un ciclo y nuevas perspectivas, edited volume (Barcelona: Bellaterra, 2006); Rule of Law in Latin America: The International Promotion of Judicial Reform, co-edited with Rachel Sieder (London: Institute of Latin American Studies, 2001); and “Las relaciones de poder y la justicia” in Luis Pájarro (ed.), Los actores de la justicia en América Latina (México: UNAM, 2007).

Manuel A. Gomez is an Assistant Professor at Florida International University College of Law, where he currently teaches international and comparative law, international commercial arbitration, collective litigation, and legal institutions in Latin America. Before joining FIU, Professor Gomez was a Lecturer in Law and a Teaching Fellow at Stanford Law School (2005–7), where he previously completed his doctoral (JSD) and master’s degrees (JSM) in law. Since 1995, he has also been a member of the faculty at the Universidad Central de Venezuela Law School (Caracas, Venezuela), and on different occasions, a Visiting Professor at the Universidad Católica del Táchira (1996), Universidad Católica Andrés Bello (2000–1), and Universidad Metropolitana Law School (2005). Professor Gomez obtained his first law degree with cum laude from the Universidad Católica Andrés Bello in Caracas, Venezuela (1995), where he also completed a specialization in civil procedure (1995) and practiced law for several years. Professor Gomez has conducted research and has written academic papers in a variety of areas including dispute resolution, comparative civil procedure, complex litigation, legal and institutional reform, legal education, and the legal profession. In 2007, Gomez received the Richard S. Goldsmith Award for the most outstanding paper in dispute resolution at Stanford University as well as a prize awarded by the Venezuelan Studies Section of the Latin American Studies Association (LASA). His doctoral dissertation also received the Law and Society Association’s dissertation prize in 2008.
Contributors

Alexandra Huneeus is Assistant Professor of Law and Legal Studies at the University of Wisconsin Law School. Before joining the UW faculty in 2007, Professor Huneeus was a Fellow at Stanford University’s Center on Democracy, Development, and the Rule of Law. She received her Ph.D. from University of California, Berkeley (2006), and her J.D. from Boalt Hall, the Berkeley Law School (2001). Her research interests lie in judicial politics, human rights, and legal cultures in Latin America. Recent publications include “Judging from a Guilty Conscience: The Chilean Judiciary’s Human Rights Turn” (Law and Social Inquiry, 2010). Her Ph.D. dissertation explored the Chilean judiciary’s changing attitude toward cases of Pinochet-era human rights violations and the rule of law.

Diana Kapiszewski is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of California, Irvine. Her research interests include the role of courts in politics and governance in Latin America, comparative constitutional politics, and qualitative methods. Her dissertation addressed the role of the Argentine and Brazilian high courts in economic governance in the postauthoritarian period. Recent publications include two chapters (one with Samuel P. Handlin) published in Reorganizing Popular Politics: Participation and the New Interest Regime in Latin America, edited by Ruth Berins Collier and Samuel P. Handlin (University Park: Penn State University Press, 2009) and “Doing Courts Justice: Studying Judicial Politics in Latin America” (with Matthew M. Taylor, Perspectives on Politics, December 2008). She also edited Encyclopedia of Latin American Politics (Westport: Greenwood Press, 2002). She holds a Ph.D. in political science from the University of California, Berkeley (2007), and master’s degrees in Latin American studies (Georgetown University, 1994) and Spanish (Middlebury College, 1991).

Pablo Rueda is Professor in the faculty of political science at the University of Rosario, Bogota, Colombia, and a researcher at the Observatory of Collective Action Networks of the same university. He is currently finishing his Ph.D. at the University of California, Berkeley. His most recent research explores the relationship between economic and constitutional reforms and social struggles in Colombia, particularly of indigenous movements. Previously, he has published on judges and armed conflict, human rights, and social rights. Among his recent publications are “Hacia una Visión Dinámica de la ‘Legalización’ de la Política Internacional: Revisión Crítica de la Bibliografía” (Rev. Desafíos 10, Bogotá, 2004); “Política Judicial y Legislativa: La Influencia de la Tutela sobre la Legislacion” (Rev. Tutela 43, Bogotá, 2003); “El Acceso de las Parejas Homosexuales al Sistema de Seguridad Social: Derecho al Reconocimiento Judicial” (Rev. Tutela 31, 2002); “Jurisprudencia Constitucional y el Conflicto Armado Colombiano” in Antonio Barreto and Daniel Bonilla (eds.), Derecho Constitucional: Perspectivas Críticas (Bogotá: Uniandes, 2001); “El Consejo de Seguridad de la ONU y la Proteccion de los Derechos Humanos en la post-Guerra Fría” (Rev. Desafíos 2, 1999); and “La Corte Penal Internacional y el Conflicto Armado Colombiano” 43 Colombia Internacional 45 (Ed. Uniandes Bogotá, 1998).
Rachel Sieder is Research Professor at the Centre for Research and Advanced Study in Social Anthropology (Centro de Investigaciones y Estudios Superiores en Antropología Social, CIESAS) in Mexico City. She is also an Affiliated Senior Researcher at the Christian Michelsen Institute in Bergen, Norway. She was previously Senior Lecturer in Latin American politics at the Institute for the Study of the Americas, University of London, where she remains a Research Associate. Her research interests include indigenous rights, access to justice and judicial reform, indigenous law, and human rights. Among her publications are The Judicialization of Politics in Latin America (coedited with Line Schjolden and Alan Angell, New York: Palgrave, 2005); Multiculturalism in Latin America: Indigenous Rights, Diversity, and Democracy (ed., New York: Palgrave-Macmillan, 2002); and Promoting the Rule of Law: Perspectives on Latin America (London: Institute of Latin American Studies, 2001), coedited with Pilar Domingo. Recent articles include “Derechos indígenas, reformas multiculturales y globalización legal: ¿La construcción del ‘Estado de derecho’ en Guatemala?” in Juan Manuel Palacio and Magdalena Candiotti (comps.), Justicia, política y derechos en América Latina (Buenos Aires: Prometeo, 2007) and “The Judiciary and Indigenous Rights in Guatemala” (International Journal of Constitutional Law, 2007). Between 1999 and 2008, Sieder was coeditor of the Journal of Latin American Studies (Cambridge University Press).

Anne Skjaevestad is a Research Associate at the Christian Michelsen Institute (CMI), University of Bergen. Her master’s thesis was titled “The Mapuche People’s Battle for Indigenous Land: Possibilities for Litigating on Indigenous Land Rights” (May 2006, University of Bergen). Her research on the Mapuche people forms part of the CMI’s ongoing project “Courts and the Poor.”