

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

Reality Television and Arab Politics

Contention in Public Life

What does it mean to be modern outside the West? Based on a wealth of primary data collected during five years, Reality Television and Arab Politics analyzes how reality television stirred an explosive mix of religion, politics, and sexuality, fueling heated polemics over cultural authenticity, gender relations, and political participation in the Arab world. The controversies, Marwan M. Kraidy argues, are best understood as a social laboratory in which actors experiment with various forms of modernity, continuing a long-standing Arab preoccupation with specifying terms of engagement with Western modernity. Women and youth take center stage in this process. Against the backdrop of dramatic upheaval in the Middle East, this book challenges the notion of a monolithic “Arab Street” and offers an original perspective on Arab media, shifting attention away from a narrow focus on al-Jazeera and toward a vibrant media sphere that compels broad popular engagement and contentious political performance.

Marwan M. Kraidy is Associate Professor of Communication at the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Pennsylvania. Previously a Fellow at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and Director of the Arab Media and Public Life (AMPLE) project, Kraidy has authored Hybridity, or the Cultural Logic of Globalization (2005), and coedited Global Media Studies: Ethnographic Perspectives (2003). He has written widely and contributed frequently to media discussions of Arab media and global communication, mostly on National Public Radio.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

---

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

COMMUNICATION, SOCIETY AND POLITICS

Editors

W. Lance Bennett, University of Washington

Robert M. Entman, The George Washington University

Editorial Advisory Board

Scott Althaus, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

Larry M. Bartels, Princeton University

Jay G. Blumler, Emeritus, University of Leeds

Doris A. Graber, University of Illinois at Chicago

Regina Lawrence, Louisiana State University

Paolo Mancini, Universita di Perugia

Pippa Norris, Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University

Barbara Pfetsch, Freie Universitaet, Berlin

Philip Schlesinger, University of Stirling

Gadi Wolfsfeld, Hebrew University of Jerusalem

Politics and relations among individuals in societies across the world are being transformed by new technologies for targeting individuals and sophisticated methods for shaping personalized messages. The new technologies challenge boundaries of many kinds – between news, information, entertainment, and advertising; between media, with the arrival of the World Wide Web; and even between nations. Communication, Society and Politics probes the political and social impacts of these new communication systems in national, comparative, and global perspective.

A list of books in the series follows the index.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

---

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

Reality Television and Arab Politics

CONTENTION IN PUBLIC LIFE

Marwan M. Kraidy

University of Pennsylvania

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

32 Avenue of the Americas, New York NY 10013-2473, USA

Cambridge University Press is part of the University of Cambridge.

It furthers the University's mission by disseminating knowledge in the pursuit of education, learning and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org

Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9780521769198

© Marwan M. Kraidy 2010

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2010

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloguing in Publication data

Kraidy, Marwan, 1972–

Reality television and Arab politics : contention in public life / Marwan M. Kraidy.

p. cm. – (Communication, society and politics)

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-0-521-76919-8 (hardback) – ISBN 978-0-521-74904-6 (pbk.)

1. Reality television programs – Arab countries – History and criticism.
2. Reality television programs – Political aspects – Arab countries.
3. Television viewers – Arab countries – Attitudes.
4. Public opinion – Arab countries. I. Title. II. Series.

PN1992.8.R43K73 2009

791.45'6–dc22                      2009010065

ISBN 978-0-521-76919-8 Hardback

ISBN 978-0-521-74904-6 Paperback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication, and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

---

For Ute

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

---

Reality and the representation of reality are always far apart. But the gap between the two reaches a breaking point when a society experiences a deep crisis in which individuals don't have enough time to formulate discourses to explain to themselves what they are doing.

Fatima Mernissi (1987, x)

If we, in late modernity, have an idea of reality, it cannot be understood as the objectives given lying beneath, or beyond, the images we receive of it from our media. How and where could we arrive at such a reality "in itself"? For us, reality is rather the result of the intersection . . . of a multiplicity of images, interpretations and reconstructions circulated by the media in competition with one another and without any "central" coordination.

Gianni Vattimo (1992, 7)

Even if any terminology is a reflection of reality, by its very nature as a terminology it must be a selection of reality, and to this extent it must function also as a deflection of reality.

Kenneth Burke (1970, 45)

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

Contents

Acknowledgments	page xi
Preface	xv
Introduction: Beyond al-Jazeera	1
1 Screens of Contention: The Battle for Arab Viewers	22
2 Voting Islam Off the Island? Big Brother in Bahrain	46
3 The Saudi-Lebanese Connection	66
4 Contesting Reality: Star Academy and Islamic Authenticity in Saudi Arabia	91
5 Gendering Reality: Kuwait in the Eye of the Storm	119
6 A Battle of Nations: Superstar and the Lebanon-Syria Media War	144
7 The “New Middle East”? Reality Television and the “Independence Intifada”	166
Conclusion: Performing Politics, Taming Modernity	192
List of Interviews	215
Further Readings	219
Bibliography	221
Index	245

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

---

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

Acknowledgments

I was fortunate to witness as a teenager in the 1980s the explosion of privately owned media in wartime Lebanon, and to come of age in the 1990s with what has become known as the “Arab media revolution.” It is thanks to those firsthand experiences that I began exploring Arab television as a social and political force, and an accounting of everyone who has contributed in some way to my understanding of this puzzling world is simply impossible. This book bears the imprint of numerous friends, colleagues, family members, students, teachers, intellectuals, journalists, directors, producers, and critics who inhabit the various communities and institutions through which I have been fortunate to pass. Without the many media workers throughout the Arab world who have shared their experiences, frustrations, and aspirations, some of whom must remain anonymous, this book would simply not exist. I am grateful to all.

At American University, Louis Goodman and Hamid Mowlana supported preliminary fieldwork. A large research grant from the U.S. Institute of Peace funded extensive field research in Dubai, Kuwait, Beirut, London, and Paris, and a yearlong fellowship at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars enabled me to analyze my massive data and start writing. At the center I enjoyed edifying conversations about politics and scholarship with Lee Hamilton, Michael Van Dusen, Haleh Esfandiari, and Robert Littwak, and about publishing with Joseph Brinley. Other Fellows, especially Larry Rosen and Michael Suleiman, gave generous feedback. At a crucial stage in the writing process, Barbie Zelizer invited me to spend a semester in residence at the Scholars Program in Culture and Communication at the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Pennsylvania. During that semester vigorous intellectual stimulation came by way of doctoral

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

students in my Culture and Modernity in the Arab World seminar, my fellow scholar Robin Wagner-Pacifici, the Annenberg faculty, and various visitors. Several times during the writing process, the Stanley Foundation of Muscatine, Iowa, invited me to speak and write about Arab media to the policy world and the public at large. As I was finalizing the manuscript, I benefited from a visit to Amman, Jordan, under the auspices of the Center for Global Communication Studies at Annenberg (thanks to Monroe Price and Susan Abbott).

Since the Annenberg School became my academic home, Michael Delli Carpini, dean of the school, has provided an ideal working environment; Joe Turow has been an irreplaceable mentor and Barbie Zelizer an invaluable supporter; and Bob Hornik, John Jackson, Carolyn Marvin, and Monroe Price have been engaging interlocutors. Fortuitous conversations with Kathleen Hall Jamieson and Klaus Krippendorf helped me crystallize theretofore nebulous ideas. Stimulating colleagues, inquisitive students, dedicated staff, and the activities of the Scholars Program in Culture and Communication and the Center for Global Communication Studies have made this a special place to teach, think, learn, and write.

By inviting me to speak at the University of Texas at Austin half a dozen times during the last five years, Karin Wilkins and Joe Straubhaar contributed more than they imagine to the evolution of this book.

I am grateful to Lewis Bateman, Emily Spangler, and Mark Fox at Cambridge University Press for a smooth editorial and production process, and to Christine Dunn for her copyediting.

Marc Andrejevic, Marlena Badway, Douglas Boyd, Peter Dahlgren, Fabienne Darling-Wolfe, Lauhona Ganguly, Larry Grossberg, Ute Kraidy, Libby Morgan, Patrick Murphy, Monroe Price, Courtney Radsch, Larry Rosen, Mary Anne Tétreault, Graeme Turner, Joe Turow, Bob Vitalis, Robin Wagner-Pacifici, Olesya Wenger, and Barbie Zelizer read and commented on portions of the manuscript. Briar Smith read several renditions of every chapter and caught many infelicities. Michel Kraidy's keen eye helped me get my dates and facts straight. Joe Khalil read the entire manuscript thoroughly and gave generous recommendations. Heidi Khaled marked the index under a tight deadline. The technical support staff at the Annenberg School has been top notch, and Chris Holland deserves special thanks for helping resolve formatting and indexing crises. Heartfelt gratitude to Deb Porter, who keeps the machine running smoothly.

At the risk of forgetting someone, the following colleagues contributed in ways big and small: Ibrahim al-Marashi, Jon Alterman, Hussein Amin,

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Jon Anderson, Marc Andrejevic, Walter Armbrust, Pat Aufderheide, Lemi Baruh, Elizabeth Bird, Douglas Boyd, Sandra Braman, Nasser Chour, Edward Comor, Nick Couldry, Michael Curtin, Dima Dabbous-Sensenig, Peter Dahlgren, Nabil Dajani, Susan Douglas, John Downing, Waddick Doyle, Michelle Dunne, Nabil Echchaibi, Tariq Elseewi, Riad Ferghani, Loyal Ftouni, Néstor García-Cañclini, Yves Gonzalez-Quijano, Larry Gross, Larry Grossberg, Tourya Guaybess, Kai Hafez, Sune Haugbølle, Stewart Hoover, Michael Hudson, Adel Iskandar, Sean Jacobs, François Jost, Joe Khalil, Lina Khatib, Gholam Khiabany, Rami Khouri, Patricia Kubala, Shanti Kumar, Amanda Lotz, Ian Lustick, Dima Matar, Melani McAllister, Toby Miller, Nancy Morris, Patrick Murphy, Silvia Naguy-Zekmi, Assem Nasr, Christine Ogan, Radikha Parameswaran, Trevor Parry-Giles, Andrea Press, Aswin Punathambekar, Yeidy Rivero, Bill Rugh, Tarik Sabry, Naomi Sakr, Christa Salamandra, Paddy Scannell, Mehdi Semati, Jacob Skovgaard-Petersen, Catherine Squires, Annabelle Sreberny, Jonathan Sterne, Helga Tawil-Souri, Zala Volcic, Bruce Williams, Ferruh Yilmaz, and Mohammed Zayani.

Comments and criticism came from audiences at the following universities and institutions: American University, American University of Beirut, American University of Paris, Copenhagen, Georgetown, Hong Kong-Baptist, Indiana-Bloomington, Iowa, Kadir Has (Istanbul), Kuwait, Lyon, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, National Defense, North Dakota, North Dakota State, Pittsburgh, Temple, Texas-Austin, Wisconsin-Madison and Wisconsin-Milwaukee, Villanova, Virginia, Westminster, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Center for International and Strategic Studies, Palestine Center, Social Science Research Council, State Department, U.S. Institute of Peace, Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, Jordan Media Institute (Amman), and the Stanley Foundation (Dubai, Iowa City, Milwaukee, and Pittsburgh).

From Washington, D.C., Emile el-Hokayem introduced me to Pierre el-Daher in Lebanon, who in turn arranged for me to speak with key people at LBC and generously gave me several boxes of videotapes of Star Academy and other LBC programs. My American University colleague ‘Abdulaziz Sa‘id connected me with ‘Abdelrahman al-Rashed, General Manager of al-Arabiya in Dubai, who generously opened the door to the MBC Group. Also in Dubai, Jihad Fakhreddine and Shadi Qandil introduced me to key industry people. Jon Alterman, Director of the Middle East Program at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, provided a key contact in Kuwait, where Nadia and Hadi

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Chemaly provided further contacts and Fady Sbeih explained the intricacies of the publishing business. Also in Kuwait, Entesar Alazmi helped me schedule many interviews with journalists, media managers, and activists, and Aisha al-Rshaid pleasantly surprised me with a thick envelope of clippings about the Kuwaiti reality television episodes. Mamoun Fandy connected me to the staff of Asharq al-Awsat in London.

I pilfered ideas and segments from my own work previously published in Arab Media and Society, First Monday, International Journal of Communication, International Journal of Middle Eastern Studies (Cambridge University Press), Journal of Communication (Blackwell), Middle East Journal of Culture and Communication (Brill), and Television and New Media (Sage), the publishers of which are gratefully acknowledged. The Arab Documentation Center in Beirut sold me world nonexclusive rights for Figure 7.1.

Two friends and collaborators deserve special mention: Patrick Murphy for his advice and support during the years and Joe Khalil, for his insights and introductions into the Arab media industry, welcoming me in his home in Dubai in 2004 and 2005, and having survived being my housemate and coauthor (of another book)!

A supportive extended family was instrumental to the completion of this book. I wrote this book's conclusion while enjoying the hospitality of Julian Flores and Maren Sartorius Flores in Amecameca, Mexico. My parents, Aida and Michel Kraidy, provided a home away from home during many months of field research. They tirelessly recorded and stored dozens of episodes of Arab reality television, collected clippings, and provided unwavering support. My brothers Ziad and Ghassan sent me dozens of valuable articles and were enthusiastically supportive.

Bruno and Maya bravely handled my frequent and long absences, sometimes by learning names and locations on a world map of places "papa" visited. Their love and energy sustained me in magical ways; I hope one day they find this book worth it. Ute, my soul mate, life-partner, critic extraordinaire, and gifted graphic designer, read various chapters, endured anxious conversations, and created the perfect cover for this book. Without her this book would be a ghost; thanks to her it has blossomed. She selflessly cared for children and home during my physical and mental leaves, all the while tending to her own work. She put up graciously with my recurrent travels, unforgiving writing schedule, and the tensions that inevitably come with it. To her I dedicate this book.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

Preface

On a warm summer evening, making our way up a narrow street, we left behind the fishermen's harbor of the ancient city of Byblos, Lebanon. I had been in the country for about two months, since early April 2004, doing research on what I initially conceived as a study of the overlaps between popular culture and politics in the Arab world, guided as much by a long-standing conceptual interest in the issue as by my mounting frustration with the obsession with al-Jazeera as a stand-in for Arab media. We were in Byblos to see my brother giving a piano concert in the old Saint Jean Marc church up the street. Suddenly, my two-year-old son leapt onto the street.

"Bruno!" I called, panicked by the sight of my toddler jumping onto a street that had a fair amount of car traffic. As I hauled my son back to safety, we were quickly surrounded by a group of teenagers, mostly girls, some smiling, others giggling, and several excitedly repeating "Esmo Bruno? Esmo Bruno!" (His name is Bruno? His name is Bruno!) Among them were several school girls wearing the veil, on a school trip from the Northern city of Tripoli to visit Byblos's ancient ruins; some teenage tourists in jeans, t-shirts, and tank tops; and a few local boys and girls stepping out from the souvenir stores and eateries dotting the area. The name Bruno is uncommon though not unheard of in Lebanon. What was it about that name that piqued the interest of these youngsters?

Bruno, they explained to me, was a Lebanese contestant on Star Academy, a bilingual (Arabic and French), pelvis-rotating heartthrob, whose popularity turned out to be short lived when viewers voted him out of the show early on. I had watched a few episodes of Star Academy, taking detailed notes for what I thought would become one chapter in my book about entertainment media and Arab politics. The encounter on the street of Byblos triggered a chain of ideas and field observations

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-76919-8 - Reality Television and Arab Politics: Contention in Public Life

Marwan M. Kraidy

Frontmatter

More information

PREFACE

that led me to scrutinize the reality TV fever as it gripped one Arab society after another, and to investigate the social and political implications of the phenomenon.

The timing of the Byblos incident was propitious, as I was about to embark on a two-week trip to Dubai for fieldwork in Dubai Media City and interviews with managers, producers, directors, journalists, and corporate analysts. After several years doing extensive research in several countries, viewing a dizzying amount of Arab reality TV shows, analyzing hundreds of newspaper columns, and poring over institutional histories, I realized that I was on to something more far-reaching than I had imagined: by stirring a volatile mix of politics, religion, business, and gender, the Arab polemics over al-Ra'is (Big Brother), Superstar, and Star Academy crystallized epochal debates about what it meant to be modern in the Arab world. This led me to recast Reality Television and Arab Politics as an attempt, however limited, to contribute to what the philosopher Charles Taylor called “perhaps the most important task of social sciences in our day: understanding the full gamut of alternative modernities which are in the making in different parts of the world.”<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Taylor, C. (1999). “Two Theories of Modernity,” Public Culture 11 (9): 165.