

Contents

Acknowledgements	page ix
List of abbreviations	xi
Notes on the text	xiii
Prologue: explaining Coleridge’s explanation	i
1 The true philosopher is the lover of God	18
A spiritual philosophy	21
The revival of natural theology	29
Platonism	33
The Platonic Trinity	36
German Idealism and the Platonic Tradition	40
Paley, Locke and Socinianism	45
Priestley, Unitarianism and Platonic idealism	49
Identity and difference: henology or ontology?	59
Supreme being and self-consciousness	65
‘I AM WHO I AM’	75
2 Inner word: reflection as meditation	88
Aphorism	89
Meditation and awakening: spiritual exercises	93
Reflection, recollection and restlessness	102
The soul as the mirror of the divine	109
The ascent of the mind and the inner word	116
The communication of truth and biblical symbols	127
The philosophic and the beloved apostle	136
Reflection and rational discrimination	145
3 The image of God: reflection as imitating the divine spirit	152
Prudence	154

viii	Contents
	Sensibility	157
	The two worlds	161
	‘Know Thyself!’	168
	Spiritual aids	180
	Autonomy and the Euthyphro dilemma	188
4	God is truth: the faculty of reflection or human Understanding in relation to the divine Reason	192
	The faith of science	202
	Reason and reflection	214
	Notional speculation	222
5	The great instauration: reflection as the renewal of the soul	228
	Robert Leighton and dying to self	243
	Original sin	247
	Baptism and spiritual renewal	262
6	The vision of God: reflection culture, and the seed of a deiform nature	265
	Hume, Gibbon and the basis of ‘Enlightenment’	266
	Coleridge’s philosophical mysticism	279
	Epilogue: the candle of the Lord and Coleridge’s legacy	286
	Coleridge and Anglo-Saxon Victorian idealism	286
	Coleridge and twentieth-century religious thought	291
	Bibliography	301
	Index	328