Shakespeare in Print

Shakespeare in Print is the first ever comprehensive account of Shakespeare publishing and an indispensable research resource. Andrew Murphy sets out the history of the Shakespeare text from the Renaissance through to the twenty-first century, from the twin perspectives of editing and publishing history. Murphy tackles issues of editorial and textual theory in an accessible and engaging manner. He draws on a wide range of archival materials and attends to topics little explored by previous scholars, such as the importance of Scottish and Irish editions in the eighteenth century, the rise of the educational edition and the history and significance of mass-market editions. The extensive appendix is an invaluable reference tool which provides full publishing details of all single-text Shakespeare editions up to 1709 and all collected editions up to 1821. The listing also provides full details of a selected range of major editions beyond these dates to the present day.

ANDREW MURPHY is Reader in English Literature at the University of St Andrews. He is author of Seamus Heaney (second edition, 2000) and But the Irish Sea Betwixt Us: Ireland, Colonialism, and Renaissance Literature (1999), and editor of The Renaissance Text: Theory, Editing, Textuality (2000).

All books incur debts, but a book such as Shakespeare in Print acquires creditors at a rate of profligacy that would shame a drunken gambler. These pages serve to acknowledge only my major debts – I hope the many other people who have helped with the book in one way or another, and whose names do not appear here, will forgive the oversight and accept a less personal expression of genuine gratitude.

My first word of thanks goes to my St Andrews colleagues, who have greatly facilitated work on this project over the course of several years. Robert Crawford and Nick Roe helped to nurture the book and Neil Rhodes was an exemplary reader of the entire manuscript – his comments and his consistent support and encouragement have been a wonderful gift. Rachel Heard served as research assistant on the project, funded by a grant from the British Academy. Her work was, in every respect, first rate.

My thanks also to those who encouraged the project in its earliest stages, especially Tom Berger, Graham Holderness, Randy MacLeod, Laurie Maguire and Leah Marcus. Reverend Dr Jim Rigney provided moral support and generously supplied materials. Parts of the book were read by Lukas Erne, Trevor Howard-Hill, John Jowett, Richard Knowles and Paul Werstine and I am very grateful to all of them for their feedback. Stanley Wells served as both an informal and a formal reader of the book and his feedback and advice were invaluable and greatly contributed to strengthening the text. I would also like to thank those scholars who were kind enough to share with me pre-publication copies of their work, especially Lukas Erne, Trevor Howard-Hill and Richard Knowles (again) and David Scott Kastan, Edward Ragg and Jean Addison Roberts.

Many of those involved in the New Variorum project were extraordinarily generous in providing me with assistance. Paul Werstine patiently answered complicated questions about obscure editions. In an extended series of emails, Richard Knowles shared both his general textual wisdom and his revisions to the Variorum Handbook. The Variorum Hamlet editors – Bernice Kliman and Eric Rasmussen – provided me with a copy of one of their primary research files and Judy and Dick Kennedy also very generously allowed me access to some of their Midsummer Night's Dream materials. I am also very grateful to a large number of other New Variorum, Arden 3 and New Cambridge Shakespeare editors who took the trouble to respond to requests for information – my apologies that I cannot list all of them individually here.

Work on this book could not have been carried forward without the generous support of several funding agencies. I wish to thank the Bibliographical Society, the British Academy, the Carnegie Trust for the Universities of Scotland and the Shakespeare Birthplace Trust for providing research grants. My particular thanks to the Leverhulme Trust, for awarding me a fellowship which enabled me to take a year out from teaching to work on the book and also for funding an extended trip to a range of UK libraries.

I have run up debts to many libraries: my home library at St Andrews (my particular thanks to Christine Gascoigne and the staff at Special Collections), the Edinburgh University Library, National Library of Scotland, British Library, University of London Library, University of Hertfordshire Library, Cambridge University Library, Trinity College Cambridge Wren Library, Bodleian Library, Birmingham Central Library, Trinity College Dublin Library, National Library of Ireland, Library of Congress and the University of Michigan Library. My thanks to the staff of all of these institutions. A particular word of thanks must go to Susan Brock at the Shakespeare Centre Library at Stratford-upon-Avon for her kind assistance and to Stanley Wells for helping with my visit there. I am also grateful to Martin Maw, who facilitated my work at the Oxford University Press archives and to Edwin Moore, who helped me access the Peter Alexander files at HarperCollins in Glasgow.

One expression of institutional gratitude remains outstanding and that is my enormous debt to the Folger Shakespeare Library. Kathleen Lynch, Carol Brobeck, Barbara Mowat and the staff of the library and of the Folger Institute made me feel welcome and at home from the very first moment I arrived at East Capitol Street, SE. I was delighted to receive a fellowship from the Folger in support of my project and was humbled when I discovered that the award would be issued in the names of Myra and Charlton Hinman. Betsy Walsh was extremely accommodating in searching out materials while I was at the Folger and in chasing up last minute queries when I was on the other side of the Atlantic. The desk staff at the library were models of indulgent patience when I submitted ticket after ticket demanding to see complete runs of obscure multi-volume editions. Fellow readers made working at the library an intellectual and companionable pleasure and my particular thanks go to regular Supreme Court diners (and occasional Hawk and Dove drinkers) Fernando Cioni, Lukas Erne, Steve May and Kirk Melnikoff. My thanks also to Dympna Callaghan, Jay Halio, Margaret Rose Jaster, David Scott Kastan, Laurie Maguire, Stephen Orgel, Jean Roberts, Bruce Smith, Peter Stallybrass, Alden and Ginger Vaughan and all the other scholars who made me feel welcome in Washington, and to Leah Marcus and Linda Gregerson for inviting me to speak at Vanderbilt and Ann Arbor while I was in the US. I would also like to thank Jacqueline Belanger, Peter Holland, Andrew Nash and Ramona Wray for invitations to give talks on material drawn from this book at the Centre for Editorial and Intertextual Research (University of Cardiff), the Shakespeare Institute, the Institute for English Studies (University of London), and Queen's University Belfast.

I am greatly indebted to my Cambridge editor, Sarah Stanton, who fruitfully shaped this book by encouraging me to rethink the original proposal and who efficiently guided the book through to publication. The comments provided by the press readers at various stages during the book's genesis were enormously helpful. Jan Sewell cast an eagle eye over the chronological appendix and offered many invaluable corrections and Maureen Leach was a speedy and very helpful copyeditor. Thanks are also due to Sarah (and to Elisabeth Leedham-Greene) for facilitating my work on the Cambridge University Press archives at the press itself and at the Cambridge University Library.

It is traditional in acknowledging those who have helped with a work of scholarship to include a rider exempting them from all responsibility for errors which remain in the text. In a book such as this, which includes so much factual information, it would be a great convenience to be able to blame others for any errors in the pages that follow. Sadly, however, for all the mistakes that may – and I dare say will – be found in this book, I can only hold my wrists out and say: 'it's a fair cop, gov; I'll come quietly'.

Finally: a word of thanks to everyone outside the Shakespearean or academic orbit who made life pleasurable while the book was underway. My particular thanks to Vincent Durac, Susan Manly, Gill Plain, Rhiannon Purdie and Andrew Roberts and Sally Kilmister. Frank and Elaine Hayes supplied a copy of F1 2001, which (together with a copy of GT2 provided by the book's dedicatee) was a vital tool as the book was being written. Tina Kelleher took me to see Cal Ripken play for the Orioles. Chen and Lili Liebshtein (and Luz, Don, Jorge, Chino, Claudia, Mika and Divi) made Washington truly feel like a home away from home. Charonne Ruth has, as ever, been a staff and a star. Shakespeare in Print is dedicated to Gerard Murphy: my oldest friend and encourager.
