

Contents

Acknowledgments	page ix
Introduction, or the thing at hand	I
1 Toward an anthropologic: poetry, literature, and the discourse of the species	10
Frankenstein and the end of letters	13
“Poetry” is not “Literature”	17
Frankenstein : the mariner as a failed poet	20
Poetry as an object of discourse: definitions and discontents	23
Poetry discoursing: toward an anthropologic of imagination	29
Poetry unbound/rebound: toward a discourse network	35
2 Do rustics think?: Wordsworth, Coleridge, and the problem of a “human diction”	43
From human diction to human mind: do rustics think?	46
How rustics might think: about masters, for example	54
Personification, impersonation, ventriloquism: the ambiguous work of poetry	62
Discursive negotiations: moral philosophy against poetry against moral philosophy	65
Telling stories about others: “Ruth” as a critique of ethnographic seduction	69
Experiments on the border: ballad mediations	79
3 Literate species: populations, “humanities,” and the specific failure of literature in Frankenstein	84
The rupture in the “human” world	87
Natives of the world	91
The science of education	93
Acquiring human being: humanities as remedy	96
Renouncing human being: species revising	100
Securing the world for human being: toward a Malthusian humanitarianism	104

viii	Contents
4	The “arithmetic of futurity”: poetry, population, and the structure of the future	109
	Toward a discourse network: poetry, population, and “reforming the world”	111
	Experimenting with the future: the moral philosophical impasse of revolution	115
	Revolution redux: Shelley’s Revolt of Islam	118
	Figuring futurity: the future’s urn	122
	The threat of history: futurity as “knowing not”	126
	Entombing the past: figuring a way out of the revolutionary impasse	130
	Hypothetical histories and futurities: the future of the earth	133
	“Reforming the world”: realizing the revolutionary fiction	135
	Shelley’s Prometheus Unbound : futurity as successive reconstruction	138
	New endings: ruining ruin and rehabilitating “Man”	143
	Making possible: poetry and the discourse of man	145
	Poetic interval, invention, intervention	148
	But poetry makes nothing happen: Malthusian rebuttals	156
5	Dead poets and other romantic populations: immortality and its discontents	159
	Immortality, natality, mortality: preliminaries	163
	Immortality in the moral-philosophical field: perfectibility vs. “chastized thinking”	168
	Immortality and the structure of feeling	175
	Mode I: Godwin’s sepulchral mnemotechnics	177
	Mode II: Wordsworth and the anthropologic of natality	178
	Toward Wordsworthian immortality: natality, nativity, and “vain perplexity”	182
	Wordsworthian immortality: the reconstruction of natality	185
	The end of Wordsworth and the end of immortality: Wordsworth’s Ode undone	189
	Shelley’s grave inquiries: “populous solitude” as a critique of romantic consciousness	194
	Other populations: “hungry generations” and Keats’s immortals in pain	201
	Critical mortalities: dead poets	209
	Epilogue, or Immortality interminable: the use of poetry for life	216
	Notes	227
	Bibliography	268
	Index	276