HEBREW SCHOLARSHIP AND THE MEDIEVAL WORLD

This book brings together specially commissioned contributions by leading scholars from around the world, who study the place of Hebrew scholarship in the Middle Ages. Hebrew language is at the heart of the volume, but beyond that there is a specific focus on scholarly investigation and writing, interpreted in the broad sense to include not only linguistic study pursued for its own sake but also as applied in other areas, such as biblical commentary or poetic creation. At the same time there is a stress on contemporary scholarship, and several of the contributions survey recent research in major areas.

The place of Hebrew scholarship within a wider medieval world is a subject that receives special attention in the book - particularly the interaction between Jewish scholars and their Christian and Muslim counterparts.

nicholas de lange is Reader in Hebrew and Jewish Studies at the University of Cambridge. He is a former President of the British Association of Jewish Studies, and is a Council Member of the Jewish Historical Society of England. He is the author of many books, including An Introduction to Judaism (Cambridge, 2000)
