

Contents

Preface	page xiii
Sigla and editorial conventions	xviii
Bibliographical abbreviations	xx
Nicknames for manuscripts frequently referred to	xxvi
1 Introduction	1
Some principles concerning evidence	3
What the reader is presumed to know	5
“Historiography”: the previous study of the subject	8
England and the Continent in medieval liturgy	12
Two areas further excluded	14
The excursuses	15
Chronological sequence and the shape of this book	16
Excursus: on sources	20
Manuscripts and catalogues	20
Medieval English church buildings	26
Canonical materials for medieval England	27
2 Early Anglo-Saxon England: a partly traceable story	30
Some historiography, c. 1643–c. 1900	31
Before 597	32
The Augustinian mission	36
Gospel-lectionary evidence from the age of Theodore	38
Northumbrian sacramentary tradition	41
The canons of “Clofesho,” 747	45
York: archbishop Egbert	47
York: Alcuin	48
The monastic office	51
Towards the ninth and tenth centuries	53
Excursus: on the terms Gregorian and Gelasian as used here	56
3 Later Anglo-Saxon: liturgy for England	62
Liturgy in minster churches	63
Prescriptions for secular clergy: Wulfstan and Ælfric	66
Athelstan’s books and the metrical calendar	68
The Leofric missal: its first component (= “A”)	72
The second strand of the Leofric missal (= “B”)	75
	vii

viii	Contents
	The Regularis Concordia	78
	Æthelwold's benedictional	81
	Swithun, Æthelwold, and the Winchester tropers	83
	Ælfric's instructions for the monks at Eynsham; the influence of Amalarius	85
	From an Æthelwoldian house: the Missal of Robert of Jumièges	88
	Æthelnoth and the Christ Church, Canterbury benedictional	91
	The Red Book of Darley: extrapolation to a possibly secular context	94
	How widely was the secular office observed in late Anglo-Saxon England?	96
	Towards (inevitably) Lanfranc and the Anglo-Norman regime	98
	A note on gospel books	99
4	The Norman Conquest: cross fertilizations	101
	The work of Lanfranc	102
	Lanfranc's Constitutions	106
	Dissemination of the Constitutions	108
	Winchester New Minster and its missal	110
	Glastonbury and the disaster of 1083	112
	St Augustine's, Canterbury	113
	Can Lanfranc's liturgy be inferred?	118
	Another possible strand of Anglo-Norman monastic tradition	123
	Wells(?): the Giso sacramentary	124
	Wulfstan of Worcester and his portiforium	126
	The liturgical program of Leofric at Exeter, 1050–72	129
	Leofrician books for the office: collectar and psalter	132
	Leofric missal "C"	136
	A further attempt at monastic uniformity?	138
	Excursus: on method in the comparison of liturgical texts	141
	J. W. Legg's 1897 "Notes"	141
	A practice case	145
	Legg's provisional conclusions	146
	Our presumption of continuity	147
	Collation tables, concordances, and corpora	149
	Case study: the feast(s) of pope(s) Leo and the associated mass prayers	153
5	Monastic liturgy, 1100–1215	157
	The St Albans sacramentary and its textual puzzles	158
	The two St Albans graduals and a processional	165
	Gestures towards shortening liturgy at St Albans	169
	Office liturgy at St Albans	170
	The daily office at Winchcombe	173
	The Sherborne cartulary	176
	Fragments of a Glastonbury collectar	179
	Durham's Lanfrancian echoes	180
	A Bury St Edmunds missal	184
	Towards a synthetic view: Ely and Gloucester as concluding instances	186

Contents	ix
Excursus: on ascription of liturgical books to specific churches	192
Bury St Edmunds as test case	192
6 Benedictine liturgy after 1215	200
General Chapters and customaries	201
The Norwich customary	203
Bishop Salmon's visitation of Norwich, 1308	207
Bishops of Worcester and the Benedictine houses in their diocese	208
The Worcester antiphonal	210
The Worcester cathedral sanctorale	212
Tewkesbury's bifurcated missal	215
Evesham and its several books	217
Hyde abbey: its breviary and its miracles	220
Office books at Coldingham/Durham, Ely, and Muchelney	223
Westminster abbey and the Westminster (or Lytlington) missal	227
Saints and abbots at Westminster	230
The Westminster missal again: Legg's use of it	234
The Sherborne missal	236
Hagiographical peculiarities at Sherborne	238
Mass at Sherborne	240
Addendum: The "Burnt Breviary" of Christ Church, Canterbury	242
7 Other monastic orders	243
Cluniacs	243
Breviary-missals: priors' books?	244
Office and mass at Pontefract	246
Other Cluniac books	247
Cistercians	248
The oldest English witnesses: four late twelfth-century missals	251
"Native" saints in English Cistercian liturgy	254
Evidence for the office	257
Two Cistercian booklists	260
How uniform was English Cistercian liturgy?	262
Carthusians	264
Liturgy at the English Charterhouses	265
Three detailed sources: the "Questions," a collectar, and a mass ordinary	266
Other service books owned by English Charterhouses	268
8 The non-monastic religious orders: canons regular	272
Augustinian canons	272
The problem of shadowy beginnings	275
The Haughmond gradual	277
The Oseney ordinal	278
Corroboration from Wigmore and "Hanley Castle" books	279
Augustinian processions and processionals	281
A possibly unified Augustinian use?	282
Mass texts for the August 28th feast	283
Liturgy at Barnwell	285
Lesnes: the evolution of a missal	288

x	Contents
	Guisborough: the fullest picture	290
	Towards an hypothesis, through the Kenilworth missal-manual	293
	Premonstratensian canons	297
	Booklist evidence	298
	Redman's visitations; the late fifteenth century	301
	Towards "Englishness"	302
	Gilbertine canons (and nuns)	303
	Gilbert of Sempringham and his communities	304
	An early-stratum book and its supplementing	306
	An attempt at standardization?	307
9	The non-monastic religious orders: friars	311
	Dominicans	311
	Before Humbert's reforms	313
	The Dominican office liturgy	314
	Dominican mass liturgy	316
	Reflexes in English society	318
	Franciscans	320
	Franciscan portable breviaries	323
	Two early missals	324
	Some local connections	325
	Franciscan liturgical impact in England	327
	Carmelites	327
	Simon Stock and the earliest English Carmelites	328
	Regulating Carmelite worship: an early ordinal and Sibert's revision of 1312	330
	The later fourteenth century, I: the "Reconstructed Carmelite Missal"	331
	The later fourteenth century, II: the Cambridge(?) breviary	333
	Carmelite hagiography	334
	An improbable concluding figure: John Bale	336
	Austin friars	337
	Excursus: on liturgical books from female religious houses	342
	Surviving books from specific nunneries	343
	The liturgical books of Barking	347
10	Old Sarum: the beginnings of Sarum Use	350
	Putative influences after the move	351
	Leofric missal "C" as a possible model	352
	The episcopates of Osmund, Roger, and Jocelin (1078–1184)	353
	The modern editions of the Sarum missal and gradual	357
	Inferences from the sanctorale: Leonard, Katherine, Wulfram, Aldhelm	359
	A highly tentative conclusion	363
11	New Sarum and the spread of Sarum Use	365
	The work of Richard Poore	366
	The visitations of parish churches in 1220	369
	The "Old Ordinal" in Frere's Use of Sarum	373
	The spread of "Sarum" in the mid-thirteenth century	377
	"Sarum" ordinal and "Sarum" ordinary for the mass	378

Contents	xi
A further Sarum saint: Cuthburga	381
Steps towards a hesitant reconstruction	384
Towards the wider spread of Sarum Use	386
12 Exeter: the fullness of secular liturgy	388
Leofric's successors and their legacies: the inventory of 1327	389
An Exeter/Sarum missal	392
The Crawford Sarum missal: an Exeter book?	394
From Worcester to Exeter, perhaps by way of Wells	395
Quinil's work of consolidation	396
John de Grandisson and his ordinal	398
The Legenda Exon.	402
Grandisson's legacy and Exeter tradition	403
Exeter cathedral and the question of "Use"	406
Ottery St Mary	408
The passing of the Grandissonian moment	410
13 Southern England: final Sarum Use	412
Frere's Use of Sarum again	412
Was there a single New Ordinal?	414
F. H. Dickinson's edition of the printed Sarum missal(s)	416
The lingua materna rubric	419
Mass(es) in capitulo	420
When is a missal a Sarum missal? (the case of BL Add. 25588)	421
Festa synodalia	423
Later Sarum breviaries	424
Procter and Wordsworth's Breviarium ad usum Sarum	425
A fifteenth-century attempt at clarification: Maidstone's Directorium	427
The shape of later manuscript Sarum breviaries	428
Matins in the evening on great summer feasts	430
The Sarum Lenten litanies	430
"Ubi dedicata est ecclesia in honore ..."	433
Classification of feasts	434
The Rubrica magna and its effect	436
New saints' feasts: legislation and implementation	437
A concluding case study: Hippolytus	442
14 Regional Uses and local variety	445
York Use	445
Early York calendars	447
York Statutes and York Use	448
Witnesses to York Use in the fourteenth century	450
York missals and Henderson's edition of them	451
A York gradual in a village church	452
Evidence from York breviaries	454
The constitutive criteria for York Use	456
The canon of the mass at York	458
Towards glimmers about origins, through a vernacular source	460
Hereford Use	463
Modern awareness of Hereford Use	466

xii	Contents
	Consuetudo Herefordensis in the thirteenth century	468
	Clearer light: the thirteenth-century breviary	470
	Fourteenth-century changes	473
	The distinctiveness of Hereford Use	475
	End of Hereford Use or end of the middle ages?	478
	London (St Paul's) "Use"	480
	Backwards, towards a possible twelfth-century ordinal?	481
	The St Paul's saints	485
	Episcopal tightening: Baldock and Braybrooke	488
	St Paul's Use and the churches of London	491
	What Clifford ended	495
	Usages at Lincoln and (faintly) Wells	496
	Lincoln origins	498
	The Lincoln consuetudinary and the (non-existent) ordinal	499
	The scanty service book evidence for Lincoln "Use"	502
	Wells cathedral	505
	Liturgy in parish churches	509
	Booklists and visitation returns	510
	Books that parish clergy used: thirteenth and fourteenth centuries	513
	Fifteenth-century books less than sumptuous	519
	Books for the office in parish churches: Penwortham, Wollaton, Ranworth	521
	Less splendid (and more instructive?) service-book evidence	526
	Two fields largely unploughed	527
15	Towards the end of the story	529
	The Bridgettines	529
	Bridgettine liturgical books	530
	Bridgettine liturgical bookishness	536
	Whitford's Martiloge (1526)	537
	The "Englishness" of the English Bridgettines	538
	The Nova festa and para-liturgical "feasts"	539
	Sanctoral luxuriance: Elizabeth Shelford's book of liturgical devotions	542
	The collectar-plus of Robert Miles, OP	544
	Printed service books	545
	Service books for Lady Margaret Beaufort	549
	Service books for the religious orders	550
	The end of the story	552
	Index of Manuscripts	556
	Index of Saints	563
	General Index	572