

Index

Note

The index follows closely the structure of the text and should be used in conjunction with the Table of Contents, the Table of Treaties (for references to treaty by article), the Tables of Cases for a full record of citations, and the Bibliography. Headings in the index usually correspond closely to the short title of the war crime in question. There are separate entries for war crimes in international and non-international armed conflict with no cross-reference between the two unless differences in the short titles are such as to distance the items alphabetically. There is however double cross-referencing from other relevant headings.

References to individual cases are included when they are dealt with at some length in the text or play a particularly important role. Otherwise they are dealt with collectively (eg 'post-WW II case law' or omitted from the index). No attempt is made to index the cases themselves other than in relation to the main thread of discussion. For a full record of cited cases, see the Tables of Cases (alphabetical and by jurisdiction).

Elements of Crime (EOC), apart from the General Introduction to the EOC (GI(EOC)), are not indexed as such but are treated by reference to the ICC Statute under the relevant subject headings. The absence of any reference to the mental element (mens rea) under a particular crime means there is no relevant case law or other discussion.
