EMpress Marie Therese and Music at the Viennese Court, 1792–1807

This is the first study of the musical achievements of Empress Marie Therese, one of the most important patrons in the Vienna of Haydn and Beethoven. Building on extensive archival research, including many documents published here for the first time, John A. Rice describes Marie Therese’s activities as commissioner, collector, and performer of music, and explores the rich and diverse musical culture that she fostered at court. This book, which will be of interest to musicologists, historians of artistic patronage and taste, and students of women and music, elucidates this remarkable woman’s relations with a host of professional musicians, including Haydn, and argues that she played a significant and hitherto unsuspected role in the inception of one of the era’s greatest masterpieces, Beethoven’s Fidelio.

John A. Rice is a musical historian who has taught and published widely. In addition to many journal articles on eighteenth-century music he has published two books, W. A. Mozart: La clemenza di Tito (Cambridge, 1991) and Antonio Salieri and Viennese Opera (Chicago, 1998), recipient of the American Musicological Society’s Kinkeldey Award.

Acknowledgments

I presented parts of this book as papers at congresses of the International Musicological Society in London (1997) and Louvain (2002), at the conferences “L’Opéra-comique à l’époque de Boieldieu” (Rouen, 2001), “Simon Mayr und Wien” (Ingolstadt, 2001), and “Domenico Cimarosa: un napoletano in Europa” (Aversa, 2001), and at colloquia at Rice University (1997) and the University of Southern California (2002). I am most grateful to those who organized the conferences and colloquia for inviting me to participate and to those who attended the talks for their comments and questions.

Studies of musical patronage, especially when they have as their central figures musicians as energetic, cosmopolitan, and adventurous as Empress Marie Therese, cross many lines separating more frequently cultivated fields of scholarship, such as those involving single composers and genres. One of the chief pleasures of writing this book was the contact into which it brought me with a large number of scholars, including several outside of musicology, who generously shared their expertise and specialized knowledge with someone they may legitimately have felt was trespassing on their turf. I have thanked many of them in footnotes. But many others contributed to this book, including Evan Baker, Dwight Blazín, Peter Branscombe, Walther Braunies, Annedore Brock, Bruce Alan Brown, David Charlton, Malcolm S. Cole, Franz Eichenseher, Cliff Eisen, Christine Getz, Alvar Gonzalez-Palacios, Géza Hajós, Kathleen Kuzmick Hansell, Ernst Hintermaier, Leopold Kantner, Thomas Leibnitz, Bruce C. MacIntyre, Jeremiah W. McGrann, Paolo Mechelli, Robert Münster, Rupert Ridgewell, Ronald T. Shaheen, Tomislav Volek, and Neal Zaslaw. To all of them I express heartfelt gratitude.

The staffs of the Haus-, Hof- und Staatsarchiv and the Wiener Stadtbibliothek were as expert and helpful as they have always been. In the Musiksammlung of the Österreichische Nationalbibliothek the former director Günter Brosche gave me access to manuscript inventories of the Kaisersammlung, while Ingeborg Birkin-Feichtinger provided useful information and advice on numerous occasions. Otto Biba, director of the archive of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde, shared with me his knowledge of Viennese musical culture and helped me identify items from the Kaisersammlung that form part of his collection. Martin Czernin, archivist of the Schottenstift, made available to me the autographs of church music written by Joseph Eybler for the empress and a quiet place to study them.

The British Library, the Boston Public Library, the New York Public Library, the Pierpont Morgan Library, and the libraries of Rice University, the University of Texas, the University of Minnesota, the University of California at Los Angeles, the University of California at Berkeley, the University of Southern California, the University of Iowa, and Harvard University have generously allowed me to use their collections. The Rochester Public Library in Rochester, Minnesota provided me with both a pleasant place to work and – by way of its efficient inter-library loan service – scholarly books from around the country.

Michael Lorenz and Dorothea Link read an early version of the typescript and gave me much helpful advice. Dr. Lorenz in addition checked my transcriptions of Viennese documents against the originals and answered many queries involving Viennese culture and language. Rita Steblin took time out of her busy schedule of research and teaching in Vienna to inspect and in some cases transcribe documents and musical manuscripts. Lorenzo della Chà read and corrected my transcriptions of documents in Italian.

Two of the composers whose music Marie Therese especially loved are the subject of research by scholars who helped me greatly. Charles H. Sherman, having devoted much of his life to the music of Michael Haydn, gave me the benefit of his vast knowledge of documents related to Haydn’s life and of sources for his music. Wolfram Enßlin, who recently finished a dissertation on Ferdinando Paër, sent me copies of parts of the dissertation and of several librettos set by Paër and answered numerous queries.

Eva Badura-Skoda chaired the sessions at the congresses of the International Musicological Society in 1997 and 2002 in which I discussed Marie Therese’s musical activities. She followed the project during the intervening years, equally generous in her musicological guidance and her Viennese hospitality.

For more than a decade Dexter Edge has shared with me his knowledge of eighteenth-century musical sources and concert life, and his enthusiasm and intellectual vigor have repeatedly energized my own research. As this book neared completion, he read the typescript (some parts of it in more than One draft) and commented on it with a thoroughness and insightfulness that allowed me to improve it greatly.

My wife Mariza and my daughter Lydia have put up gracefully with my fascination with Marie Therese, and even (I hope) shared it a little.

A note about quotations and transcriptions of documents

When quoting from texts in languages other than English I have used my own translations, except where specifically indicated. When the source for a quotation is an unpublished document or a printed text that might not be readily available to readers with access to a good scholarly library and inter-library loan services, I have generally given the original in a footnote. One exception to this policy involves the words of Marie Therese herself, which I have always quoted in the original language (when this has been accessible to me) as well as in English translation.

In quotations that include references to keyboard instruments with strings, I have left the notoriously ambiguous words cembalo, clavecin, and Klavier untranslated.

In transcriptions of documents I have kept editorial interventions to a minimum and have made no attempt to bring capitalization, punctuation, and spelling into agreement with current practice.
